House Blocks A.F.L.'s Wage Bill, 162-131, In Bitter Row

Republican Chief Concedes Defeat

Motion to Recommit Is Doomed to Failure, Rep. Martin Says.

By Sidney Olson.

After seven and one-half hectic hours of the bitterest wrangling in the memory of Capitol attaches, the House last night junked the American Federation of Labor's substitute wages-hours bill by a vote of 162 to 131.

Working desperately to hold their forces together, the House leadership fought off two attempts to adjourn, one attempt to send the Administration bill to the "whole House" with the enacting clause stricken out, and finally the attempt to sidetrack the Administration bill in favor of the rigid A. F. of L. measure.

A Republican leader, Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, virtually conceded defeat last night of today's inevitable motion to recommit the bill, saying:

"I think it's all over now. They've got the votes to beat recommittal. But I'll vote to recommit, of course."

A. F. L. Holds Balance

Veteran observers, more cautious, asserted Federation of Labor votes now hold the balance of power in the House. If this group joins the opposition—Southern Democrats and most Republicans—recommittal is still highly possible.

The session was at times roaringly hilarious—once a guffawing reporter nearly fell over the press gallery railing—but it was also extremely tense, particularly during the four separate rulings on delicate parliamentary points made by the presiding chairman of the committee of the whole, Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts.

Bill Nearly Wrecked.

Almost at the outset the "Norton amendment"—the Labor Committee's latest draft—was nearly wrecked on a parliamentary snag when Representative Jere Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, made a point of order that the tariff provisions in the Norton substitute bill violated the rights of the Ways and Means Committee and were not germane to the bill.

McCormack upheld Cooper's point of order.

While the members sat stunned, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ripped away the ruled-out page, rushed the bill to the desk again, and Labor Committee Chairman Mary Norton, of New Jersey, re-introduced it as the substitute.

Although the bill's entire 42 pages

Two Berry Leases Held Invalidated By Late Royalties

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 15 (AP).—A special master ruled invalid today two leases held by Senator George L. Berry and associates on marble deposits in the Norris Dam reservoir, because royalties to landowners had not been paid within the stipulated time limit.

Ben H. Testerman, Knoxville attorney, handed this opinion to a three-man Federal commission hearing a suit by the Tennessee Valley Authority to have the leases declared worthless.

Attorneys for the Berry interests said they would appeal the ruling.

Tammany Boss Signed Robinson Certificates

Mr. and Mrs. "Donald Louis Robinson" who vanished mysteriously in Moscow, got their fake U. S. passports on birth certificates signed by Albert Marinelli, Tammany leader who resigned under fire, it was revealed yesterday.

The "Robinson" passports, it was further disclosed, were the only ones issued in New York in which birth certificates signed by Marinelli were involved, dispatches declared.

Marinelli's signature also was on the passport applications, according to the New York sources. They quoted Washington officials as saying that the application was the "first and only" to emanate from Marinelli's office as New York County Clerk.

Henry Alexander, counsel to the county clerk's office vacated by Marinelli under Special Prosecutor Dewey's investigative fire, said that for several years it "had not been customary to certify passport applications" in that office, the Associated Press reported.

Alexander added that so far as he knew none had been certified in Marinelli's office. He said county clerks' offices at times are asked to certify authenticity of notaries public before whom passport statements are sworn.

It was pointed out also that Marinelli might have been asked to certify the birth certificates of the persons long dead on which the "Robinsons" obtained passports.

United Press reported Marinelli was said to have been unable to recall any such transaction and it was pointed out that any of almost 200 clerks in his office might have signed his name to the applications as a matter of routine. Federal investigators were unable to find anyone in the office who recalled the "Robinsons."

Jury Receives Algic Mutiny Charges Today

Judge Stresses Difference Between Strikes at Sea and on Land.

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Dec. 15.—The case of 14 sailors of the S. S. Algic, charged with endeavoring to make a revolt and conspiracy to revolt in the harbor of Montevideo, Uruguay, will go to a jury in Federal Court here tomorrow.

Late this afternoon, Judge W. Calvin Chesnut told the jury that there was a "grave difference between a strike on land and on sea." The conduct of American seamen aboard ship, he said, is governed by the laws of the United States and not by the rules of any union to which they may belong.

Looking up at the middle-aged jurors and emphasizing his words, Judge Chesnut said:

"There is no right to strike against the laws of the United States by anybody, at any time or at any place. . . .

He reminded the jurors of the government's contentions, namely: that the 14 members of the crew held a union meeting aboard the Algic and voted to cut off steam to prevent "scab" stevedores from loading the ship; that the steam was cut off and the ship thus rendered idle; that two delegates of the crew notified the first mate of the crew's decision and that, as a result, control of the ship was taken out of the hands of Capt. Joseph A. Gainard, and his officers.

"I instruct you," said Judge Chesnut, "that, as a matter of law, if you find these to be facts, then those facts do constitute a violation of the law as charged in the indict-

Housing Bills Facing Delay in Both Branches

Slowed down by committee amendments and controversy in both branches over the scope of the program, the Administration's emergency housing measure, No. 3 bill on the special session agenda, last night was threatened with delay until the regular January session.

The House committee will attempt a report on the bill today, after broadening home-building aids to extend up to $10,000 houses, but a Senate Banking sub-committee, after a night conference, was still far from full agreement on a program.

Possibility of the bill passing both houses before adjournment was dimmed by this sub-committee study ordered by the Senate group after full committee hearings. There are only six legislative days remaining before scheduled adjournment.

No Conclusions Reached.

Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the Senate sub-committee, said "no final conclusions on anything" were reached at last night's meeting.

It was learned the sub-committee passed most of the meeting up to

Night Debate Fails to Move Crop Aid Bill

Measure's 'Price Fixing' May Lead to Fascism, Wallace Declares.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate last night struggled through its first night meeting of the special session on a farm bill which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace declared has an "element of price-fixing" in it that if applied in extreme form could lead to fascism.

The Senate recessed at 11:05 p. m., after last-minute changes in the bill designed to limit administrative costs of the new program, and freeing farmers contracting to export more than 30 per cent of their cotton crop from restrictive quota provisions.

Senators were called back into session last night by Majority Leader Barkley after a three-hour recess for dinner. Refusing to place an appropriations "top" on the program, the Senate at an afternoon session had approved, 48 to 38, "such sums as are necessary" to finance crop control.

Fixed Parity Sought.

A domestic allotment cotton amendment by Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, believed one of the targets of Wallace's broad assault on "price fixing," was before the Senate when adjournment was taken. It attempts to guarantee a fixed parity price payment of 20 cents a pound to cotton farmers on domestically-consumed portions of their crop.

Criticizes Price Fixing.

Earlier, Wallace, at a press conference, criticized "these price-fixing programs, which sometimes are called domestic allotment plans, sometimes the two-price system." He was asked if the Senate bill's parity payments schedules present a "similar situation."

"It has an element of that same difficulty in it—in a diluted form—if you get the prices too high," he replied. "It is not nearly as bad. It would be a much more workable approach."

$10 Bounty Offered.

Slipped into the farm bill at the night session by Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, was an amendment granting cotton farmers an optional bounty of $10 a bale on exported cotton, providing they agree not to export less than 30 per cent of their crop and to comply with soil conservation requirements.

Such farmers would not be subject to the bill's excess quota penalties except on cotton grown in excess of the farmer's ten-year average cotton crop. The $10 a bale bounty on exported cotton would be in lieu of all other benefit payments.

The restriction on farm program administrative costs was the result of a compromise devised by Majority

End Raids, British Tell Japan; Nipponese Admiral Relieved As Result of Panay Bombing

Survivors Recount Gunboat's Defense

Crew Fought to the Last, Refugees Reaching Shanghai Declare.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Dec. 16.—Japanese authorities today announced Rear Admiral Teizo Mitsunami, chief of Japanese aerial operations, had been relieved of his post as a result of the bombing of the United States gunboat Panay.

The government thus acted swiftly to carry out its pledge to the United States Government that officers responsible for the Panay attack would be punished, said Domei, the Japanese news agency.

Mitsunami was recalled, since most air bombings in China have been carried out by naval planes.

Southern Drive Mapped.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Dec. 16.—Undismayed by bitter world criticism of bombing and machine gunning of the United States gunboat Panay and other foreign ships, leaders of Japan's armed forces were reported today to be preparing a great drive into South China to complete their conquest of this war-ravaged nation.

The Panay refugees, many seriously wounded, were coming down the Yangtze aboard the U. S. S. Oahu and the British gunboat Bee, convoyed by the Japanese gunboat Hodzu. They were expected in Shanghai this afternoon.

Official figures of the U. S. S. Augusta showed three persons killed in the bombing, including Sandri Sandro, Italian war correspondent; 16 were injured—all Americans—and 58 civilians and members of the crew of the Panay uninjured and accounted for.

All Americans Safe.

Nanking reports indicated all Americans there were safe. Gen. Iwane Matsui, chief of the Japanese conquerors, placarded the town with announcements requesting citizens to "return to your homes where your ancestors lived and prospered and pursue your daily life in complete peace."

Three Panay survivors who arrived here on a Japanese flying boat—Jim Marshall, magazine writer; F. Hayden Vines, Shanghai executive, and John L. Hodge, sailor on the Panay—were in Emergency Hospital.

Propped on pillows, their heads, arms and legs swathed in bandages, they told of the last fateful movements aboard the Panay when its guns blazed at the attacking planes as they swooped down "like wild geese" and unloaded bomb after bomb on the all but defenseless targets.

Fought to the Last.

They told how American sailors fought to the last before the Panay sank, firing at the roaring planes and at land crews that raked their decks with machine-gun fire.

"I would like to tell all Americans," Marshall said, speaking with difficulty between cracked lips, "that every man on the ship had guts. They fought to their last bullet.

"The boys on the Panay trained their machine guns on the Japanese planes that attacked us and kept on fighting until the ship went down."

He said the Panay was flying American flags and had the Ameri-

Below-Freezing Weather Retains Grip on Capital

Washington entered its fifth successive day of sub-freezing weather yesterday after the mercury climbed from 21 at 4 a. m. to 32 at 11 a. m. and hovered at the freezing mark for nearly ten hours before it began to drop again.

A light coating of ice, caused by freezing rain, imperiled highway traffic in Montgomery County yesterday where, in one instance, four cars piled up in a crash on the East-West Highway. In more than a score of mishaps throughout the county, including the wrecking of a county nurse's machine, both drivers and passengers escaped injury.

Text of British Note to Japan

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 15.—The text of the note sent today by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota:

I have the honor of instructions from His Majesty's government of the United Kingdom to address your excellency on the subject of attacks made by Japanese aircraft and land forces on British warships and merchant shipping at Wuhu and near Nanking December 12. These incidents clearly raise grave issues.

At Wuhu a British tug which had conveyed from Nanking his majesty's consul, the British military attache and flag captain to the British rear admiral, the Yangtze, was attacked by Japanese machine-gun fire after transferring these officers to H. M. S. Ladybird.

The latter proceeded to join the tug in order to protect her when she observed a Japanese field gun battery firing on merchant ships concentrated above the Asiatic Petroleum Company's installation. The firing continued and was directed at H. M. S. Ladybird herself. There were four direct hits on this vessel: One naval rating (seaman) was killed, another seriously wounded and three minor casualties, including the flag captain.

ANTHONY EDEN.

A direct hit also was seen to be sustained by the British merchant ship Suivo. H. M. S. Bee then arrived on the scene and was also fired on by a shore battery.

The commander of the H. M. S. Bee landed to protest and was informed by Col. Hashimoto, senior Japanese military officer then at

2 New Experts Join Staff for Mental Survey

Group of 3 U. S. Doctors to Participate in Study of D. C. Cases.

Three experienced Public Health Service surgeons, instead of one, will survey the Capital's mental hygiene facilities, or lack of them, it was revealed yesterday.

Determined to make this phase of the District health investigation as thorough as possible, Surgeon General Thomas Parran has detached Drs. Grover A. Kempf and L. M. Rogers from duties in New York and Lexington, Ky., respectively, for the work here.

Previously it had been announced that Dr. J. W. Wilson was being brought here from New York for special study of mental cases, from those of problem children requiring guidance to the system of admitting patients into St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Assistant Surgeon General Robert Olesen, director of the general public health study, said Dr. Wilson probably will specialize in the institutional and commitment problems, Dr. Kempf in vocational guidance of the mentally sick and Dr. Rogers in expansion of the city's mental hygiene services.

The latter, a year and a half ago, helped establish a "problem clinic" at the University of Kentucky which ha sre ceived wide notice for helping students adjust themselves.

In addition to these three experts, Dr. W. L. Treadway, assistant surgeon general in charge of mental hygiene service, also is expected to participate in the study. Drs. Wilson and Kempf already have begun their tasks and Dr. Rogers is on his way from Lexington.

Recession in Business Draws Fire of Landon

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 15 (AP).—The current business recession brought criticism of the New Deal from Alf M. Landon here tonight. Making a flying visit to the city to confer with Frank E. Gannett, Rochester publisher, the 1936 Republican nominee and former Governor of Kansas said:

"President Roosevelt said some time ago that the Nation is on its way to a sound recovery under his plans. Present evidence therefore would seem to indicate either that his plans were unsound or that he has mismanaged."

Hull Opposes War Referenda Plea as Unwise

Denies Fleet Will Mass for Show of Power in Japanese Waters.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday placed the State Department firmly in opposition to the proposed Ludlow constitutional amendment requiring referenda prior to the entry of this country into war.

"I am unable to see the wisdom or the practicability of this proposal," Hull said at a press conference.

On Tuesday, the 218 necessary signatures were placed on a petition to bring the Ludlow amendment resolution to the House floor. Yesterday, however, the House Judiciary Committee called off hearings on the proposal.

Denies Massed Fleet Plan.

Hull also said the United States is not considering massing its fleet in Japanese waters for a show of power, nor is it contemplating joint action with Great Britain in reprisals for Nipponese bombings of British and American vesels.

Hull's remarks were made shortly after reports had been published that the date of the spring maneuvers of the American fleet had been moved up as a result of the bombing of the gunboat Panay, and that the exercises might be held as far east as Manila.

The manuevers are scheduled to be held in March and April between the Aleutian Islands and Samoa, the territory regarded as America's first line of defense.

To Act Independently.

Hull also took occasion to deny this Government and Great Britain would unite in a common policy to be enforced jointly against Japanese in the Sino-Japanese war. He reiterated previous statements to the effect that one of the established policies of this Government called for independent action in the Far East.

Meanwhile, State Department officials awaited another communication from Tokyo in answer to this Government's protest of Tuesday, in which Japanese military and naval forces were charged with flagrant disregard of American rights, lives and property in China.

Guarantees Demanded to Halt Attacks on English Vessels.

Conquerors Press Nearer Hongkong

Failure of U. S. to Join London in Protest Stirs Comment.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 15.—Great Britain tonight formally demanded "actual measures" by Japan to halt the bombing of British vessels, and without awaiting Japan's reply, prepared for more grave complications, as the Japanese military machine drove toward Canton near the British crown colony of Hongkong.

The British note, milder than the protest of President Roosevelt, asserted the Tokyo government failed to carry out previous promises to respect British lives and property in China.

The note was dispatched after its contents had been communicated to Washington and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons Britain would not be satisfied with a mere note of apology. It was disappointing to those who believed a stern stand was imperative.

U. S. Attitude Cited.

Officials indicated that the United States' refusal to take joint action with Britain against Japan was responsible for the cautious wording of London's protest.

They believed that Washington, by choosing parallel instead of unified action, failed to forsee a more serious crisis which would follow further incidents involving British or American interests in China.

As described by Eden on the floor of Commons, the note dealt with the British government's attitude "toward a whole series of incidents" involving British lives, warships, merchant ships and property in China.

May Send More Ships.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told Commons the cabinet was studying the dispatch of naval reinforcements to Chinese waters. But there were no threats of naval movements in the note.

The reference to Japan's broken promises of respect for British lives and property was at the end of the note, following a recital of the Japanese attacks.

"His Majesty's government cannot but recall the previous incidents in which the Japanese government expressed regret for attacks made on British nationals and property and gave assurances that adequate steps had been taken to prevent any repetition," it said.

Protested to Officer.

After acknowledging receipt of Japan's apology for the attacks on British men-o'-war and merchant ships in the Yangtze River last Sunday, the note pointed out that the commander of the gunboat Bee landed and protested to Col. Hashimoto, senior Japanese military officer.

"He was informed by Col. Hashimoto . . . that the fighting on the warships was due to a mistake, but that he had orders to fire on every ship in the river," the note said. "Later in the interview the same officer stated categorically that if any ships moved on the river they would be fired on and, despite protests, His Majesty's ships Bee and Ladybird, after berthing, remained covered by guns at point blank range."

Ailing Husband Willing to Care for 7 Children While Wife Hunts a Job, but Money Is Needed

No. 17—Z Family.

The Post today presents one more case from the 25 neediest families of the District's unemployed employables for whom its Christmas fund is being collected. There is no regular relief fund for these people. They are deserving cases, investigated by an agency of the Council of Social Agencies. Their need is measured in terms of money.

The Z family is trying hard to work out its own problems. With a slight boost, the chances are all in its favor. There is a Mr. Z, a Mrs. Z and seven Z children, who range in age from a baby girl 3 years of age up to a girl who is now 18.

The Zs get their rent for their services as caretakers.

Mr. Z suffers from a heart ailment, but is able to do light work. During the summer he did enough gardening to average an income of $18 a week, and he has the promise of gardening jobs next summer. At the present time, however, the gardening business is having a closed season.

Mrs. Z has been working as a domestic two hours each morning, earning 20 cents an hour. This $2.75 a week is the present income of the family. Mrs. Z, however, plans to take a full-time job. Mr. Z will take care of the children.

Since she is a good worker, she stands a good chance of getting placed within the next two months. Soon the oldest daughter will be able to help. The future does not look too black for the Zs. At present, however, they need food.

A food budget of $54 has been worked out for them by workers interested in their case. If this amount is forthcoming, the Zs may never have to ask for relief again.

Contributions to The Post's Christmas Fund yesterday totaled $125.50. (List on page 4.) This brings the total contributed to the 25 families to date to $1,881.90.

Send your contribution to The Washington Post Christmas Fund, or leave it in the box on the first floor of The Post Building. Any amount will help, however small.

Conscience Drives Novice, 26, To Bare Illness-Inspired Crime

Torment has led Judson I. Kingman, 26, to confess his one holdup with the hope that judicial leniency will give him hospitalization for an infected lung.

Kingman, who lives in the 2000 block H street northwest, started out Monday to hold up a liquor store as the second of a series of crimes he hoped would give him the money for medical treatment.

Instead, after brooding over his holdup of a Capital Transit Company bus Sunday night at Eighteenth and Columbia road northwest, he surrendered to Detective Sergt. Joseph Shimon, an old acquaintance, after making two trips to headquarters in an effort to find him in.

Shimon said yesterday he would not believe at first that Kingman had committed the holdup. Kingman told him, he said, that his illness had left him too weak to work, and that he refused to panhandle or beg for treatment. Finally, he decided on robbery.

Shimon said that today he would visit the District Attorney's office to urge leniency for Kingman, and that he would do everything possible to get him treatment.

By the Associated Press.

Martin W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said yesterday his company achieved success by acquiring stock in other railroads.

"If the railroad hadn't expanded and hadn't been built up, it wouldn't be here today, it would have died," Clement testified before the Senate Railroad Finance Investigating Committee.

The committee had before it a chart showing the complex corporate relationship of the Pennsylvania to scores of subsidiaries, affiliates and leased properties.

On the chart were 225 separate companies, including those owned or controlled by the Pennroad Corporation, which Clement denied was in any way under the railroad company's influence.

With the aid of Clement's testimony, Chairman Wheeler sought to trace development of the Pennsylvania system since formation of the top company in 1846. Wheeler asserted the system had become "practically the second largest industrial corporation in America."

Clement's testimony showed the railroad company had acquired an interest in several companies not engaged in the railroad business.

The $100,000-a-year head of the Pennsylvania defended the road's vast expansion when Wheeler asked whether he believed it "proper" for one railroad to buy the securities of another.

He said many short lines owned by the railroad would have become insolvent during the depression except for their connection with the Pennsylvania.

Commenting on a suggestion of Wheeler, Clement said he believed it would be advisable to have a Government agency pass on railroad purchases of stock in other companies if a means could be worked out to prevent "somebody going out and running the price of the stock up" in advance of the purchase.

Wheeler declared that unless there was "regulation to stop some of these practices of financial control" there would be such an "uproar" that Government ownership would be the result.

Clement had testified the Pennsylvania paid $63,000,000 for stock in the Wabash Railroad and that the securities were now worth about $4,000,000.

"Others turned out to be pretty good," Clement answered. He said the Pennsylvania Co., the wholly owned subsidiary of the railroad which owns the Wabash stock, was paying 6 per cent.

When Wheeler reminded Clement the Pennsylvania once borrowed from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the witness said the Government had made $3,000,000 by buying the road's securities at $100 and selling them at $107.

Coal Board Quiets Storm of Protest

By the Associated Press.

Producers' opposition to a Government-written soft coal price list diminished last night after many of the prices were modified to meet objections.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

IT is simply incredible that 218 members of the House of Representatives are so naive or so willfully indifferent to the responsibilities of their office as to place their names on the petition forcing to the floor of that body the absurd Ludlow resolution for a constitutional amendment requiring a national referendum before this Government would be able to declare war on another nation.

WALTMAN.

And it is especially unfortunate for world peace efforts that the last of the 218 names—the number necessary to make the petition effective—should have been added to the document this week when President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull are confronted with the delicate situation growing out of the sinking of the American gunboat Panay by Japanese aviators.

The Japanese could not have desired a more favorable development at this time and undoubtedly that country's diplomatic emissaries here lost no time in cabling the news to the foreign office in Tokyo.

It is hard to understand why patriotic men and women, elected to a responsible place in the affairs of their country, should undertake in such manner to give aid and comfort to a group of Japanese militarists who have shamefully outraged American rights.

If it is contended these members of the House are sincere and honestly believe that they are serving the interest of their country by supporting the Ludlow resolution, then the conclusion is inescapable that nurses should be appointed to take care of them. For the Ludlow resolution is childish.

If, on the other hand, some of the 218 signers of that petition acted—as many are suspected of having done—in response to the demands of emotional or unthinking constituents stirred up by pacifist organizations supporting the Ludlow resolution, then they are playing politics at a crucial moment in the history of their country—and that cannot be justified on any basis.

Nothing could be sillier than the Ludlow resolution—not even the neutrality act. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, speaking of that measure yesterday, asserted that "from the standpoint of promoting peace and keeping this country out of war, I am unable to see either the wisdom or practicability of the proposal." Mr. Hull was speaking with restraint.

Under the Ludlow proposal, before the President and Congress could declare that a state of war exists between the United States and another country—except in the event of invasion—a national referendum would have to be held on which the populace would be asked "Shall the United States declare war on .....?"

While this is going on, what do Representative Ludlow and his supporters in this matter think the country named in that question would be doing? Does he suppose its military forces would patiently wait until the verdict of the American people was registered at the polls?

No government would take a chance on the outcome of such a referendum. In the first place, this country would swarm with spies and agents who would seek to prevent an affirmative vote on that question. Secondly, it would place itself in a position to get the jump on the United States when war is declared—if it did not make the referendum unnecessary by actually assailing American territory and arms.

What reason has Mr. Ludlow for thinking that the voters would vote down this country going to war? Indeed, the populace usually is more desirous of war than those in charge of the Government, as is evidenced by what happened in this country in 1898 and again in 1917. Instead of the decision as to whether the country should go to war being made on a basis of calm reason and sense it would be based on hysteria and prejudices. As one opponent of the proposal has said, we would have a civil war within the country as well as a foreign war outside.

But aside from that phase of the matter, has not Mr. Ludlow heard that countries now go to war without any formal declaration? At a time when the formal declaration of war virtually has been abandoned in international intercourse, he would have the United States hold a referendum on a meaningless question. Assuming that his proposal is written into the Constitution, does he suppose that any President who wanted to take the country into war would be deterred by it?

That is one of the things which this Congress and the pacifists seem unable to get into their heads. Congress can pass all the neutrality acts, constitutional amendments and laws it wishes, but it cannot bind the hands of a President who wants to go to war. There are too many ways of getting into a war. But by passing such legislation Congress can bind the hands of a President who earnestly is striving to maintain world peace and keep the country out of war.

* * *

But all this is academic, for the Ludlow proposal will never get into the Constitution. It is doubtful if it will receive the necessary two-thirds vote in the House. It is certain that two-thirds of the Senate and 36 States will never approve such a proposal. When all the oratory dies away, Mr. Ludlow will have to take consolation in the fact that he succeeded in embarrassing his Government at a critical time and made his country ridiculous in the eyes of the world.

Court Upholds Minority Right In Bargaining

Affirms Ruling That Rail Groups Can Operate Independently.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Dec. 15.—The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, sitting here today, upheld the right of long-established railway labor groups to operate independently of larger competing organizations.

The court affirmed a district court decision invalidating the National Mediation Board's designation of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes as collective bargaining agency for a minority group of clerks who have been members of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway Clerks Association since 1921.

After separate elections in 1934, when station employes chose the brotherhood and the clerks their association, the Mediation Board ordered both to be represented by the larger brotherhood. This order was upset by the Federal court for the Middle District of Tennessee.

In its ruling today the Court of Appeals said railway labor statutes "neither authorize, nor encourage, nor command the type of gerrymandering" that follows a certification which "ignores the basic facts of historical development, similarity of employment, community of interests and well-defined group choice."

The United Mine Workers Journal said yesterday private detectives and thugs "are again busy in southern West Virginia, doing everything they can to stir up troube and dissension" in the union's ranks.

"They are working for certain coal companies that now are under contract with the United Mine Workers," the union official publication added. "It is their business to endeavor to break up the union in that field.

"If they are unable to do this, then they are to preach 'autonomy' to the members in District 17, have the present district officials ousted and put the organization in the hands of a bunch of traitors who will do anything the operators want them to do.

U. S. Fire Hazards Arouse Lanham

Concern for the safety of Government employes in the 66 Federal buildings with "poor exits" was expressed yesterday by Chairman Lanham of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, to which the report of the Federal Fire Council was referred.

"If it would do any good, I would call a meeting of the committee at once," he said. "But it's too late in the session to get anything done now. We'll take it up, however, right after we come back in January."

Chairman Connally of the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, said that "our committee will take the matter up in due time."

On Capitol Hill

A COMPLEX CHRISTMAS CARD situation, on top of the involved legislative set-up was reported yesterday by attendants at Senate and House stationery stores, where members buy at wholesale rates.

Cards showing the Capitol always lead, they said, although the White House made big gains last Christmas after the Roosevelt election landslide.

Ranking next to the Executive Mansion this year is the Supreme Court. Attendants say it's the first time it has been a challenger. They attribute it to the interest shown in the court reorganization bill and Justice Black's appointment.

Business generally is better this year than last. Why? It's always that way the Christmas before Representatives go to the polls.

An Eastern Representative once bought 50,000 cards! The sad thing about it was he didn't get re-elected the next year.

The House Immigration Committee asked the Labor Department to investigate activities of Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American bund, before he became a United States citizen. The committee will decide whether it should recommend that his citizenship be canceled.

The committee also decided tentatively to approve the bill of Chairman Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, to deny United States citizenship to persons who advocate a form of government "other than that of the United States."

SENATORS IN DEBATE this week have described the farm bill as "very mysterious" and "perfectly clear."

"Anyone who has eyes can read this bill and understand it," said Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas.

But Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Agriculture Committee commented:

"When we've finished this mystery, we ought to have it compiled in a complete text. I've had about as much experience with bills as anybody here, but I've never had any experience with this kind of bill before."

PROOFREADERS who work all night at the Government Printing Office got credit from Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, for not allowing Congressmen, in the Congressional Record, to put a coat of many colors on David and sink the Merrimac in Manila Bay.

Maverick wrote the printing office it was he who spoke of David's coat of many colors.

But the next morning, he said the Congressional Record read:

The printing office told Maverick another member had "Hobson sinking the Merrimac in Manila Bay" instead of Santiago Bay.

SENATOR HARRISON (Democrat), Mississippi, said he had recommended reappointment of Kinloch Owen, New Albany, as United States marshal for the northern Mississippi district. His term expires January 19, 1938.

SENATOR MILLER (Democrat), of Arkansas, delivered his maiden speech and conferred with the President regarding what he termed improper Farm Security Administration appointments in Arkansas.

He criticized, during farm bill debate, a section of the crop measure prohibiting benefit payments to farmers who failed to grow sufficient food and feed crops "to meet home consumption requirements."

He said the provision meant "further regimentation of agriculture."

Two New Elements Produced By California's Atom Smasher

By the Associated Press.

Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 15.—The world's most powerful atom-smashing machine has produced two chemical elements and has given promise of yielding others hitherto unknown.

The research of a 24-year-old scientist, Philip Abelson, disclosed today that the machine, called a cyclotron, had formed elements No. 93 and No. 94 at the University of California.

Abelson said it was "possible but not proved" that other forms of matter had been produced in the process. He will report his findings Friday to the American Society of Physics at Stanford University.

The cyclotron changed uranium, which is element No. 92, into element No. 93, which soon turned itself into No. 94.

Both were discovered recently by the Italian scientist Fermi and associates at the University of Rome. Abelson's work confirmed the existence of the two elements.

The amount of matter produced in the experiments was too small to be seen even with a microscope but the big machine yielded one billion atoms of it—enough so that Abelson could ascertain its characteristics mathematically and chart it along with the conventional forms of matter.

The two elements have not been found in nature. This suggests that they are comparatively short-lived and gradually revert to some other form of matter.

Court Fines Ship For Four Whales

Baltimore, Dec. 15 (AP).—Federal Judge William C. Coleman today ordered owners of the whaling ship Frango to pay the Government $3,097, the value of 23 tons of oil taken from four whales he said were killed in violation of the whaling treaty act.

Judge Coleman first ordered the oil turned over to the Government but customs officials said they had no place to store it.

Governor-Elect Price Shuts Richmond Office

Richmond, Dec. 15. (AP).—Governor-elect James H. Price today had closed his office and left for an unknown retreat presumably to prepare his inaugural address, to be delivered January 19 and to map plans incident to his becoming the State's chief executive.

Friends said he had indicated to them he would give up his private law practice to devote his full energies to the state government.

Children Pay $500 To Aid Lunch Fund

School children of the District have raised $500 for the free lunch fund in the last four days, by attending magic shows sponsored by the Citizens Emergency Committee, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Boyle said that while $8,000 needed to continue the lunch program in January has not been collected, "there will be no interruption in the program."

"We are counting on clearing the amount needed, and more for the other months, at the velvet ball on January 6," she declared.

Biddle; vice president in charge of legislation and publicity, Col William O. Tufts; vice president in charge of membership and fiance, Dr. Tarlton T. Roberts; vice president in charge of work among colored, James R. Moss, and secretary-treasurer, Gordon Barnes.

Rep. Teigan Urges U. S. 5-Day Week

The Government should set an example to private industry in the five-day week, Representative Henry G. Teigan, Minnesota, said Tuesday night in an address to General Accounting Employes' Local, No. 8, United Federal Workers.

"We could cut to a five-hour day if we could consume what we produce," said Teigan.

A member of the House Civil Service Committee, Representative Teigan called attention to the fact that the State of Minnesota already has the five-day week for its employes.

House Group Pledged to Aid Traffic Safety

'Vicious Minority' Blocks Drive to Improve D. C. Laws, Says Schulte.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Legislative support of far-reaching traffic reforms—including pedestrian-control laws and city-wide parking bans—was promised yesterday as members of the House District Committee launched a new highway safety program for Washington.

Demanding prompt action from District authorities to "stop this slaughter," Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, struck at the "vicious minority" who oppose constructive efforts to safeguard city streets.

To a group of officials summoned to his office for an informal conference, Schulte said:

"We are determined to take drastic action to stop this killing. We must stop jaywalking and wild driving. The streets must be opened for moving traffic.

"The committee," he added, "is in full sympathy with the elimination of all-night and downtown parking—and you can take that message to the Commissioners. We want to legislate for the good of all, not the vicious minority who might offer opposition."

Attending the meeting were Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Maj. Ernest W. Brown police superintendent; Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor, and Representatives Arnold (Democrat), Illinois, and McGehee (Democrat), Mississippi.

"Washington has far too many accidents and fatalities," Schulte declared, calling attention to the present death toll of 98.

Although convinced the Commissioners are empowered to take immediate administrative steps toward a solution, Schulte said his committee would shoulder the responsibility if action is not forthcoming.

Pedestrian carelessness, Van Duzer declared, is responsible for the majority of Washington fatalities. Of 98 deaths thus far this year, he said, 40 were pedestrians crossing streets not at intersections.

It was agreed that pedestrian regulation was the most important item in the District's fight to curb deaths.

"And it wouldn't take but a few arrests to convince negligent walkers that we meant business," Van Duzer observed.

Admits Jaywalking.

Representative McGehee admitted he was a frequent "jaywalking" offender, and added: "But I wouldn't do it if I knew I would be arrested."

A downtown parking ban was cited as the next important step toward ultimate street safety. Van Duzer pointed out he had previously recommended such a restriction, but his efforts were blocked at the District Building. Principal opposition to a downtown prohibition, it was reported, came from merchants.

Assailing the use of District streets for night-time storage purposes, Schulte urged prompt steps to prohibit all-night parking. Van Duzer reported that approximately 75,000 cars are parked throughout the city at night.

Maj. Brown agreed to conduct a survey of available garage space in the various precincts, adding:

"The time for an all-night parking restriction is coming, and we might as well face the music."

Schulte suggested that owners of vacant lots be requested to offer off-street parking, in payment for which they would be exempted from real estate tax assessments.

With Representative Arnold leading a discussion of ways and means to control reckless and weaving drivers, it was agreed that Maj. Brown should be furnished with additional motorcycle policemen. The committee members expressed surprise when told that only 53 motorcycle men now operate in Washington.

"Drivers must be made to stay in their proper lanes," Arnold declared. "It is a pity the way some motorists drive. They act like they are handling a lot of baby buggies. Traffic must run in straight lines, turns must be made from proper lanes and more policemen must be provided to enforce these laws."

'Bootleg' Fleet Held Supplying Lottery Tickets

Legalization Group, Asking Court Review, Cites Huge Sales.

A "bootleg" fleet, reminiscent of the rumrunners of the prohibition era, is supplying speedboats with lottery tickets for smuggling into the United States, the National Conference on Legalizing Lotteries declared yesterday.

The charge was made coincident with a brief filed by the conference, asking the U. S. Court of Appeals here to restore its right to use the mails. The brief was filed by Emil K. Ellis, New York attorney, petitioning the Appeals Court here to reverse its decision of the Federal District Court last January 8, upholding a Postoffice order barring the organization from the use of the mails. The ban resulted from a cartoon contest which the department held involved a game of chance rather than skill.

Despite the vigilance of the Treasury, Postal and Customs departments, the report stated, more than $110,000,000 in Irish and Monte Carlo tickets, based on the outcome of two European horse racing events next March, "have swamped this country since October 15."

A large percentage of the foreign tickets have been smuggled or mailed into the country, the report continued, adding that "the Monte Carlo sweepstakes, operating under the Monaco government, is reported to have a $5,000,000 fund to promote their enterprise internationally.

According to the report, the Monte Carlo organization is offering a "bargain rate" ticket at $1.50 to compete with the Irish Sweepstakes

More than 6,700 Americans won prizes in the French lottery in the past two years without any publicity, the report said.

2 Men Born Same Day, Names Same, Baffle U. S. Board

By the Associated Press.

The case of two men of the same name, born the same day of parents who had the same names, presented a new problem yesterday for the Social Security Board.

Officials said that after registering more than 36,000,000 names without difficulty they recently received, only a few days apart, two applications which listed:

The same full name; the same name for the father and the same maiden name for the mother; the same date of birth.

The only difference was the address. The applications were from two men who resided a few miles apart.

"We probably will get photographs of them for the files," an official said, "since investigators report one is tall and has a thick head of hair, while the other is short and bald."

Motor Gas Kills Driver of Truck

In the afternoon State Policeman E. T. Trice looked into a truck he hhad noticed earlier in the day parked in the same place. He found Robert L. Beadles, 25, of Disco, Va., dead, and Thomas Fountry, of St. Stephens, Va., unconscious.

The men were taken to the Alexandria Hospital by the Alexandria rescue squad. Last night, Fountroy's condition was called fair. They were driving a lumber truck from southern Virginia, toward Washington. Apparently they had parked to rest and left the motor running.

Low Bond Row Flares Anew in Narcotic Case

Recent controversy over charges that Police Court prosecutors are allowing known criminals to be released on small bail flared again yesterday in the office of United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

The flareup occured at arraignment of Benjamin (Honey Boy) Sewell, alleged member of the Carlton (Cotty) Williams safecracking gang. Sewell, colored, was charged with two narcotic counts several days ago.

Sewell pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary hearing. The Commissioner asked Federal Narcotics Agent M. B. Wilson what he thought was suitable bail pending action of the grand jury.

Wilson recommended a $3,000 bond. His recommendation was immediately attacked by Sewell's attorney, C. E. Ford, who sought to have his client released under $1,500 bond.

Turnage declared he was willing to accept Wilson's recommendation.

"I will not make it any lower," Turnage said, "and I am frank to say that without the recommendation I would have set bail at $5,000."

Commissioner Turnage referred to the fact that Sewell is free on bail of $3,000 on charges in connection with a gunfight several weeks ago in which Williams was killed. Sewell escaped a police ambush that foiled an attempt to rob a safe. Turnage said:

"I have a right to take into consideration that the defendant may be mixed up, directly or indirectly, with this other thing. I owe a duty to this defendant to see that he has his day in court but I also have a duty to society. Three-thousand dollar bond in addition to the $3,000 he already is under will hold him as well as anything."

Sewell was charged with violating the Harrison and Jones-Miller narcotic acts, possessing and selling heroin, after three capsules found in his pockets at time of his arrest were found to contain dope.

Gunman Holds Up Realty Firm, Flees At Noon With $700

A colored gunman yesterday held up the Hall Realty Co., 1204 H street northeast, and escaped with between $700 and $900.

The bandit shortly after noon threatened Luther F. Hall, 69, 710 Fifteenth street northeast. Hall told police the man went to the safe in the back of the room, took the money box and fled out the front door past several men.

Police believed the robber was a customer. Hall, however, said he did not recognize his assailant. Hall described the bandit as 35 years old, 140 pounds and well-dressed.

Hahn Fire Cause Remains Mystery

Origin of the $500,000 blaze which partially destroyed the Hahn's shoe store, Seventh and K streets, will probably never be determined, officials of the Fire Department disclosed yesterday.

Working in the almost completely destroyed remnants of the store since Sunday, special investigators have been unable to uncover any evidence that might reveal the cause of the fire.

Reich Presses Austrian Union, France Is Told

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 15.—Former Premier Pierre Flandin informed French legislators tonight that Nazi leaders in Berlin had told him Germany was intent on establishing anschluss (union) with Austria.

Flandin said Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, chief aide to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, and Baron Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, also:

1. Reiterated Germany's refusal to return to the League of Nations "on any account."
2. Repeated Germany's insistence on her demands for colonies.
3. Emphasized Germany's insistence on her demands for colonies.
3. Emphasized Germany's insistence that Czechoslovakia accord greater privileges to German minorities.

Flandin spoke to deputies in the chamber corridors after indicating that his just-concluded "personal Franco-Germany relations had disclosed "considerable differences" in the nations' viewpoints.

Conclusion of a treaty between France and Germany regarding border populations in both countries, and a possible pact to curb attacks on each other in the French and German press, nevertheless was interpreted as evidence France and Germany were meeting their problems in a friendly spirit.

The border pact—concerning everyday relations such as passport requirements pasturage rights and monetary privileges for citizens who cross the Franco-German borders frequently—will be signed tomorrow night at the Quai D'Orsay.

Defense Expenses Figure in Larger Budget for Italy

Rome, Dec. 15 (AP).—Practically every department of the Italian government will spend more money, nearly a fifth of the increase for defenses, next year under the budget approved today by the cabinet.

The proposed 1938-39 fiscal budget totaled 25,035,106,948 lire ($1,308,825,561), an increase of 1,266,559,890 lire ($66,061,047).

Official figures for the fiscal year of 1937-38 have not been published, but a deficit possibly amounting to 5,000,000,000 lire ($260,000,000) was anticipated.

Senators Hold Mooney Should Receive Pardon

Investigating Committee in Doubt on Authority to Call Him Here.

By the Associated Press.

Members of a special Senate committee investigating the Tom Mooney case said yesterday they thought Mooney should be pardoned.

This expression came after counsel for Mooney had urged the committee to call him here for hearings. Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, of the committee said the group was doubtful of its legal authority to do this but that most members felt he should be free.

"I'm willing to do anything I can to aid Tom Mooney," declared Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, a committee member, "but there is the question of how we could get Mooney here if the State of California refused to deliver him."

McCarran and O'Mahoney argued that Senate committees are empowered to call witnesses only for the purpose of assembling information with a view to drafting legislation.

Mooney was convicted of murder in 1917 in California superior court in connection with the dynamiting of a preparedness day parade in San Francisco July 22, 1916.

Oysters Seized In Health Drive

Health Department inspectors yesterday confiscated 100 bushels of oysters from haulers along the waterfront after the owners failed to produce a certificate from their State health departments.

Under the new regulations of the health department, all oysters from either Virginia or Maryland must be accompanied by certificates from their respective health departments.

Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of the health inspection, issued a warning to local restaurant owners not to purchase oysters from anyone who cannot produce a health certificate.

Japanese Map Giant Offensive In South China

"Like Wild Geese."

"Three of the planes dived down to what seemed within 300 feet of the river," he said. "They came down like wild geese. They dropped bombs but they did not fire machine guns. When the ship was sinking, Anders (Lieut. A. F. Anders, of Weimar, Tex., executive officer aboard the Panay), who was too hoarse to talk, wrote orders on the bulkheads to abandon ship, get into lifeboats, jump overboard or save themselves somehow.

"A contingent of Japanese troops nearby on the shore frantically waved Japanese flags (presumably to signal the Japanese planes to stop firing) but the planes ignored them. It was then that I was hit, although I did not realize it until later."

Marshall made his way to shore, where he joined Hodge and Vines. The latter spoke Chinese, and they started overland toward Wuhu.

Fired Upon by Soldiers.

"As we started, Japanese soldiers approached us and began firing on us," he continued. "I fell flat in the ditch. The soldiers approached and rounded us up. We were taken before the Japanese officer who proved to be a good fellow. He fed and rested us and arranged transportation to Wuhu by truck."

Hodge suffered several gashes in his head, and leg bruises. Marshall was the most seriously injured, with one arm shattered by a bullet, another wound in his neck and two wounds in his shoulder. Vines had several deep cuts on his arms and legs.

Drive South Impends.

Report of Japan's impending South China invasion, which would bring her into even graver collision with Brithish interests, came from many quarters but could not be confirmed officially.

Most of them were based on the fact that large numbers of Japanese soldiers returned to the Shanghai area from Wuhu, following the capture of Nanking, and went into billets for transport to new war fronts.

The British believed that at least 50,000 of the 200,000 or more Japanese who participated in the great Nanking-Wuhu drive this month were being called back, and feared they would be sent to South China, were Britain long has been dominant because of her strategic Hongkong colony, to cut off the fugitive Chinese central government's last tenuous routes to the sea.

Wilkerson Ouster Sought by Senator

By the Associated Press.

Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, yesterday said he had conferred with Chairman Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, on the possibility of instituting impeachment proceedings against Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson of Chicago.

Truman said he thought Sumners was in a "receptive mood" toward the Missourian's proposal that Judge Wilkerson's conduct in railroad and other receiverships be investigated with a view to bringing impeachment proceedings.

Hungary Sends U. S. Tiny Part Of War Debt

Becomes First of 12 Nations to Resume Payments Defaulted in 1932.

By the Associated Press.

Hungary broke the long general suspension of war-debt payments yesterday by depositing a small partial remittance to the United States.

Its payment was only $9,828 on an obligation totaling $467,673.

But it was the first from Hungary in more than five years and represented the first resumption of payments by any of the 12 debtor nations which have been in default since 1932.

The greater part of the $1,680,170,447 which fell due to the United States today, on the regular semi-annual installment date, went by default again. Most of the other nations reiterated their inability to pay.

Only Finland, of all the war debtors, met its installment fully, as usual. Its payment was $232,143.

The Hungarian Ambassador, John Pelenyi, notified Secretary Hull of his government's intention to seek a refunding of its entire $1,965,632 debt as soon as possible.

Belgium, Latvia and Lithuania presented default notes. Great Britain, France, Italy, Poland nad Yugoslavia had done so previously. Czechoslovakia, Estonia and Rumania still were to be heard from tonight, but neither government had indicated any intention to resume payments.

Insurgents Bomb Own Base in Spain; Casualties Heavy

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 15 (AP).—Spanish government artillerymen today shelled insurgent positions near Madrid, where scouting planes reported Generalissimo Francisco Franco was massing troops.

The government said insurgent airmen bombed by mistake their own field base at Villafranca del Ebro, northeastern Spain, causing considerable damage and casualties.

Fifteen persons were killed and 30 wounded in an insurgent bombardment of Madrid last night.

Press of Japan Fails to Report Panay Reaction

Leads Public to Believe Relations Since Bombing Have Improved.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Thursday), Dec. 16.—Japan weighed new amends to the United States for sinking the United States gunboat Panay while her press today failed to report the sentiment abroad.

One government official declared she was "prepared to meet every American demand coincident with the necessities of the situation.

"We are studying yesterday's American note with the view of making all possible amends," he declares.

"Fundamentals Covered."

A government spokesman said, however, that "Japan believes the fundamentals were covered" in yesterday's Japanese note to the United States, which was presented to Ambassador Joseph C. Grew a few hours before he delivered the American note.

The American note was not published here, and the newspapers led the public to believe that relations between the United States and Japan had improved since Sunday's attack. The Japanese press published virtually nothing of the sentiment in the United States, and refrained from editorial comment.

The newspapers, however, did print a long statement of the Imperial headquarters, highest Japanese military and naval organ, in which it was charged, three gunboats fired on the Japanese warplanes when the Panay was sunk.

Regrets Take Odd Forms.

A foreign office spokesman, saying that "nobody is qualified to say anything about the Emperor," declined to confirm or deny a report that Hirohito would grant an audience to the foreign minister for presentation of a memorandum from President Roosevelt.

Two brothers—Mitsuo Yamada, 15, and Hideo Yamada, 11—donated seven yen ($2.03) "for the victims of the Panay." The foreign office promised to send it to the United States Embassy.

Would Build Duplicate.

In a letter to the newspaper Nichi Nichi, a citizen suggested that the Japanese people raise a fund for construction of "an exact duplicate of the Panay" to be presented to the United States Navy for service on the Yangtze.

Text of British Note to Japan

Wuhu, that the firing on the warships was due to a mistake, but that he had orders to fire on every ship on the river.

At a later interview the same officer stated categorically that if any ships moved on the river they would be fired on and, despite protests, H. M. S. Bee and Ladybird after berthing remained covered by guns at point blank range. Near Hsia-Sanshan above Nanking, where British merchant ships were concentrating in a part of the river previously designated by the Japanese commander in chief as a safety zone, three separate bombing attacks were made by Japanese aircraft on them and H. M. S. Cricket and Scarab which were with them.

His Majesty's govrenment now have been glad to receive Your Excellency's note of December 14 offering the profound apology of the imperial Japanese government for attacks on His Majesty's ships, stating that measures were immediately taken to prevent recurrence of such incidents and adding that they will deal suitably with those responsible and pay necessary compensation.

His Majesty's government observe that Your Excellency's note makes no mention of attacks on British merchant vessels and I am instructed to request that assurance may be given that all that was said in that note applies equally to these attacks.

His Majesty's government take particular note of the statement that those responsible will be suitably dealt with. The adequate punishment of those responsible for the particular attacks under discussion seems indeed to His Majesty's government the only method by which further outrages can be prevented.

His Majesty's government cannot but recall previous incidents wherein the Japanese government expressed regreat for attacks made on British vessels and property and have given assurances that adequate steps had been taken to prevent any repetition. They call to mind the attack made on His Majesty's Ambassador in China while traveling by road from Nanking toward Shanghai, the subsequent attack on motor cars carrying British officials on a similar journey, and attacks on British civilians and military posts in the defense perimeter at Shanghai as well as other incidents, and repeated assurances of the Japanese government of their intentions fully to respect the interests of third powers in the present conflict with China.

It is clear that steps hitherto taken by the Japanese government to prevent such attacks have so far failed in that purpose and His Majesty's government must now ask that they be informed that measures have actually been taken of a character which will put a definite stop to the incidents of which they complain.

Roper Foresees Industrial Rise

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Commerce Roper indicated yesterday he believed industrial production would turn upward soon.

"We have evidence," he said, "that production is now running below the actual demand for goods and that inventories are being reduced."

He also told a press conference the Christmas trade was running about as heavy as last year.

Sale of about a million bushels of Texas and Kansas wheat to Mexico, he announced, has been arranged through the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Engineers to Inspect Plant at Baltimore

The members of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers will make a bus trip to Baltimore Saturday to visit the glass plant of the Bromo Seltzer Co. at Mount Winans and the copper refinery on South Clinton street in that city. Luncheon will be served at the refinery.

Philadelphia Teachers Oppose Retrenchment

Philadelphia, Dec. 15 (AP).—Seventeen school employe associations petitioned the board of education today to abandon a proposed $1,900,000 retrenchment program and "borrow to the limit" to keep the present system in operation.

Tammany Boss Linked to U. S. Passport Fake

Former N. Y. County Clerk Signed Application, Quiz Reveals.

the Associated Press reported, said they were attempting to link the Robinson passports with a possible "passport mill" engaged in facilitating transportation of travelers to Soviet Russia illegally, as well as volunteers seeking to enlist with loyalist armies in Spain.

Investigators said they had hit upon a trail that may link the "Robinsons" with a group of New Yorkers, said to be Communists, who may be able to explain the real names, characters and missions of the mysterious couple in Russia.

They said they learned the applications and affidavits for the "Robinsons" passports were executed before Louise Levy, a minor official in the county clerk's office, who likewise did not remember the couple.

Usual procedure in New York is for applicants for passports to appear at the passport bureau in the sub-Treasury office, only a few blocks from Marinelli's former office in the county building.

There was added speculation yesterday to the effect that the "Robinsons," who lived a short time at the National Hotel in Moscow, posing as American writers until December 2 when the man disappeared, might have been spies.

This view was substantiated by recollection that, as long ago as August, Soviet border authorities were refusing entry to persons named Robinson, entirely without explanation at the time.

It appeared that the persons who used the fraudulent passports might not be American citizens. Reciprocal agreements between the United States and the Soviet Union require that the arrest of an American citizen be reported to United States authorities within 72 hours.

If the "Robinsons" are not American citizens, then so far as this country as concerned the Soviet government would be within its rights in failing to report their arrest.

So far, despite publication throughout the country of the "Robinsons'" passport photos, no one has come forward to identify them.

Birth certificates for the self-styled American writers were obtained from the New York Health Department in 1935 and were certified at the New York County clerk's office.

The health department in New York received request for the birth certificates through the mails, officials said, one from Brooklyn and the other from Manhattan's lower east side.

Early speculation that names on which the certificates were issued had been copied from cemetery tombstones was exploded yesterday with discovery that tombstones of the dead children involved were not marked with their names.

Marinelli is understood to have told State Department investigators he was unable to remember the application filed early in April, 1936. He claimed, it was understood, that their recording was just a routine matter of his office and he naturally would have no recollection of the act.

His deputy, it was learned, had revealed that Marinelli took the people known as the Robinsons to him, asking that their application be made out. Then Marinelli is said to have asked his deputy if he did not often do such things as routine matters, and the deputy admitted it.

"Censorship" Reported.

If application for a passport is made in Washington the applicants must be accompanied by citizens who can establish their identity.

All elements of a mystery thriller had been injected into the affair Tuesday when the State Department said it had been established that the passports were issued in the names of Donald Louis Robinson and Ruth Norma Robinson, names of actual persons who had died in childhood 25 years ago.

From New York, meanwhile, the Associated Press reported that the New York City health department announced it had been requested by the State Department to give out "no further information at this time" regarding issuance of birth certificates which accompanied the passport application.

The children were Donald Louis Robinson, aged 4 at the time of his death in 1909, and Ruth Norma Birkland, the name assumed by "Mrs. Robinson." The Birkland child was a daughter of Hilda and Ole Birkland, now reportedly living in Cristobal, Canal Zone. The child died at the age of 6, in November, 1915.

Quit Under Fire.

Marinelli's resignation followed a political controversy which began October 24 with a campaign radio address by Dewey who accused Marinelli of associating with Charles "Lucky" Luciano, whom Dewey sent to Sing Sing, and with "thieves, pickpockets, thugs, dope peddlers and big-shot racketeers."

Dewey had called 300 of Marinelli's constituents before a grand jury to prove charges of unfitness for office. The resignation came two days after Gov. Herbert H. Lehman called upon Marinelli to answer the charges.

In his letter of resignation, Marinelli said, "I cannot and will not, no matter at what cost to me, cause any further suffering and humiliation to those people." His term would have expired automatically December 31.

Trotsky Acquittal Termed a 'Farce' By Troyanovsky

By the Associated Press.

Soviet Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky asserted last night that an unofficial verdict declaring Leon Trotsky innocent of terrorism and Fascist conspiracy was a "farce."

Troyanovsky referred in a formal statement to findings of an international commission of inquiry, headed by Dr. John Dewey, of Columbia University. The commission recently declared Trotsky not guilty of charges of which he was convicted at the Moscow trason trials of August, 1936, and January, 1937.

Indicted Oil Firms Cite NRA Practices

Madison, Wis., Dec. 15 (AP).—The defense in the Federal Government's gasoline price fixing case today began introduction of evidence on retail prices in the Midwest in 1935 and 1936 after presenting its claim that the 16 oil companies on trial were indicted because they followed objectives of NRA after the law was invalidated.

John C. Marshall, Chicago, assistant general manager of sales for the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, explained the formula used by his company to determine its service station price of gasoline beginning in January, 1935.

Normal price, he said, was based on the average of "low" quotations in trade publications. To this base, he said, were added the amount of taxes, freight from Oklahoma and a 5½ per cent profit for jobbers and retail dealers.

Jury Receives Algic Mutiny Charges Today

Judge Stresses Difference Between Strikes at Sea and on Land.

ment and you will return a verdict of guilty."

He added quickly that if on the other hand, the jurors believed contentions of the defense, then they would return a verdict of acquittal.

Law Dates From 1790

Lawyers of the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, contend that the Algic sailors were merely making a "protest" to Capt. Gainard; that they thought their lives were imperiled by the incompetent "scab" stevedores aboard and that they had no intention of depriving Gainard of command.

Justice Chesnut explained that the "inciting to mutiny or revolt" statute under which the Algic sailors are being tried was enacted back in 1790 almost at the dawn of the Republic, and since has been amended and clarified.

"That law," he continued, "says that members of a crew must obey all lawful orders of the commander.

Unionism Not Involved.

"The right of seamen to join a union is not involved. They have that right just as lawyers have a right to join a bar association and doctors have a right to join a medical association.

"Seamen have a perfect right to govern themselves in a union, but always subject to the laws of the United States. The right to strike is not involved here.

"There is a grave difference between a strike on land and one on sea. From time immemorial, the perils of the sea have made it essential that authority be placed in the hands of one individual. Just as there must be a general for an army so must there be a captain on a ship. In either case, there must be obedience."

Justice Chesnut said he had never heard of a case where an American sea captain, in this case Gainard, had to telephone 5,000 miles, from Montevideo to Washington, to find out how he should deal with conditions on his ship. Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, told Gainard to place the men in irons if necessary.

Judge Warns of Bias.

"This gives rise to the thought," he continued, "that Capt. Gainard would have done better to exercise his authority before. He gives two reasons for not doing so: First, that he was ill with the flu, and second, that he wanted to avoid an outright collision between the crew and the officers. Whether there would have been such a collision is for you to decide."

Judge Chesnut instructed the jurors to consider the cases of the 14 defendants individually. He told them that they could, if they chose, convict some and acquit others. He reminded them that three Puerto Ricans, Spanish-speaking members of the crew, testified they didn't know what actually was being done at the union meeting.

"This case calls for some clear thinking," Judge Chesnut concluded. "Don't approach it with bias or from the standpoint of capital or labor, strikebreakers or union, ship owner or seaman. Approach it simply from the standpoint of what happened in the harbor of Montevideo."

By the Associated Press.

The Senate joint maritime committee heard charges yesterday that ship owners hired circus hands to replace 12 seamen who went on strike at Tampa, Fla., November 10, 1936.

Mort Borow, representing the American Radio Telegraphists Association, read into the record an affidavit to that effect, signed by Frank Frey, formerly radio officer of the S. S. Commercial Alabaman of the Moore and McCormack steamship lines.

Frey charged the 12 strikers "were replaced by mostly inexperienced men, for the most part circus hands from the Ringling Brothers Circus, which was partially disbanding for their winter quarters at Tampa, Fla."

Housing Bills Facing Delay in Both Branches

11 p. m., listening to explanations of features of the bill. Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, another sub-committeeman, expressed "doubt" the Senate bill could be reported this week.

The House Banking Committee ordered a night session last night to speed action, but postponed the meeting at the last minute until 10 a. m. today. House leaders will attempt to call the bill up after wage-hour action. Senate leaders "hoped" to displace the anti-lynching measure, after farm bill action, to approve the housing program.

The principal change in the House bill, approved yesterday by a 10-to-8 committee vote, would extend FHA insured mortgage benefits to owners of homes above the present $6,000 limitation. The home-buyer could make a down-payment of 10 per cent on the first $6,000, and 20 per cent on the remainder up to $10,000.

An amendment by Representative Frank Hancock (Democrat), of North Carolina, limiting operations of the proposad National mortgage associations so as to minimize competition with banks, was defeated, 11 to 12.

But the committee approved another amendment by Hancock to increase from $200,000 to $250,000 the cost-limit on the larger private housing projects eligible for FHA insurance.

House members also were considering special provisions in the bill to aid rural buyers of low-cost homes, now unable to qualify for Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Senate sub-committee, said he would ask the sub-committee to increase the amortization period under the bill from 20 to 25 or 30 years.

Wagner also favors exempting from all taxation the debentures to be issued by the new mortgage associations. He said this would make the debentures, which would be sold by the associations against pooled mortgages, more attractive to the buyer, and possibly permit lower mortgage rates by the associations.

Wagner also said he had in mind increasing the room-cost limitation on large-scale projects to $1,350 and on multi family projects to $1,150, instead of $1,200 and $1,000, respectively.

Last Flight Data Of Miss Earhart Goes to Archives

New York, Dec. 15 (AP).—A new kind of museum—the World Center for Women's Archives—was formally presented with its first exhibit tonight, the records, charts and maps used by Amelia Earhart on her last flight.

Dr. Edward C. Ellicott, president of Purdue University, presented the documents, sent to America at various stages of Miss Earhart's flight, to a dinner assemblage of women prominent in many fields of endeavor and friends of the missing aviatrix.

Pa. Labor Board Ruling Is Set Aside by Sourt

Philadelphia, Dec. 15 (AP).—The first Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board order to be reviewed by a Philadelphia court was set aside today by Common Pleas Judge Edwin O. Lewis.

Judge Lewis directed that the board's order to three shoe repairing companies to reinstate with back pay eight dismissed employes be set aside. He dismissed complaints of the board that the companies engaged in unfair labor practices.

Suggestion.

A thoughtful gentleman in the Forest Service yesterday told us how to keep a Christmas tree fragrant and green during the entire holiday season. Here it is:

"Set the tree in a wide mouth bottle or crock when holds about 1 gallon of water. Mix five grams of citric acid and six grams of malic acid in 3 quarts of water. When the tree is set up in the crock and supported with small wires or other suitable supports add 15 grams of calcium carbonate to the acid solution and pour the whole solution into the crock. As the tree uses up the solution, add water."

These chemicals, he says, are inexpensive and the formula should serve the purpose for most species used as Christmas trees. Hemlock, however, is one tree which does not respond to this treatment, the forester points out.

Correspondence.

Background: A. F. G. E.'s President Stengle wrote to Internal Revenue Commissioner Helvering asking preservation of civil service status for decentralized Internal Revenue employes. Now, in reply, Helvering says that every effort is being made to prevent separation from the service, but under the law collectors have the right to make their own appointments without regard to the civil service law and regulations and the bureau cannot insist on any departure from this method. Decentralization, he says, was decided on in the interest of more efficient and economical administration and, continuing:

"The transfer of this work to the field offices has made it necessary to effect a reduction in the personnel of the Social Security Tax Unit of the Bureau of nearly 300 employes. In view of the fact that the employes affected were appointed under civil service rules, every effort is being made to place as many of them as possible in other positions in the bureau to avoid the possibility of their separation from the service."

He felt doubtful over whether positions could be found in Washington for all those involved, "but you may be assured that no opportunity will be overlooked to take advantage of any circumstances which will permit their continued employment." Those whose positions are being abolished have been given opportunity to file applications for jobs in the collection districts where they claim legal residence, "and these applications have been forwarded to the collectors of the respective districts with the request that they give as favorable consideration as possible to their appointment to the rolls of their districts," Helvering stated.

Thus far, he said, "we have had very favorable co-operation from the various collectors, and it is to be hoped that in this manner many of the employes who would otherwise be separated from the service can be satisfactorily taken care of," he stated.

Federal Employes Union 262 also awakens interest to those deputy collectors in Internal Revenue who are not in the classified civil service. Lodge President J. O. Burnham says: "We believe that a strong impetus has been given to this proposal by the representations made to Secretary Morgenthau by Robert L. Johnson, of the National Civil Service Reform League . . ." The response Johnson received from Roswell Magill, acting Secretary of the Treasury, indicated that the department would welcome legislation placing the deputies under the classified service—which is very nice, if something would be done besides talking.

President Burnham also announced that the proposals of the legislative program of the N. F. F. E.—which his lodge supports from heel to shoulder—are those for extension of the merit system, extension of classification to the field services, the five-day week and the amendment to the retirement act providing for retirement at age of 60 after 30 years service at the option of the employe. Which is very nice, too, if something would be done about it besides talking.

Six locals of the United Federal Workers of America are sponsoring a meeting this evening in the Old Interior auditorium. Speakers include Philip Broughton, member of the President's Reorganization Committee; Max Wasserman, of the Social Security Board; Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A. president, and Arthur Stein, of the District organizing committee. The locals sponsoring the meeting are in Labor, SEC, Rural Electrification, FSC, WPA and Interior.

Rep. Barry to Speak.

Representative William B. Barry, of New York, will address the New York State Democratic Club of Washington, Inc., at 8 p. m. today at the National Democratic Club, 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest. His address will be the first of a series by Democratic members of Congress from New York State.

Murray Claims AFL Is Seeking To 'Use' NLRB

Steel Workers Told Aim Is to Destroy Industrial Unions in C.I.O.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 15.—Philip Murray charged today before the CIO steel workers' convention that the A. F. of L. is attempting to utilize the National Labor Relations Board in a subversive campaign aimed at destruction of industrial unionism.

Taking the floor in support of a resolution which indorsed the Wagner labor act, but denounced recent board decisions upholding bargaining claims of minority crafts in plants where majority workers had expressed CIO preference, the SWOC chairman shouted:

"The antiunion fight that has been constantly waged by the Federation against the 33 CIO unions seems to be having its effect upon certain labor administrators. At least two members of the board seem to have been diverted from the course of administration intended by the law."

Calls Green Names.

His speech came a few hours after arrival of James F. Dewey, United States labor conciliator, who is seeking to mend the CIO-A. F. of L. breach.

Dewey hurried here in the wake of a speech yesterday by Murray terming President William Green of the federation a "blithering blatherskite." Murray is chairman of the C. I. O.'s peace delegation which is scheduled to meet again Tuesday with a federation committee.

Muray said C. I. O. affiliates with their constantly swelling membership, must solidify ranks so "that the National Labor Board dare not render such decisions again."

Vote Is Unanimous.

The convention cheered its leader and passed the resolutoin unanimously.

The delegates adopted resolutions terming John L. Lewis "our peerless leader," praised him and Murray and pledged "our fealty to the cause of the C. I. O."

Discord was not discernible among 925 delegates claiming to represent 550,000 of the 800,000 workers in steel and allied industries.

Murray's recommendation that he and his staff be given blanket authority to make new agreements to negotiate new contracts with 425 steel firms which expire February 28 was referred to a committee.

30-Hour Week Urged.

Other resolutions indorsed the six-hour day, 30-hour work week; a $5,000,000,000 housing program with immediate appropriation of $1,000,000,000 by Congress to continue WPA and PWA work; Labor's Non-Partisan League; a firm policy of adhering to labor contracts; a Federal anti-lynch law and a liberalized social security act.

The resolution for the WPA and PWA appropriation said:

"The U. S. Government must recognize the cardinal right of every worker to security of employment. If the corporations don't provide jobs, there must be some power that will go over, above and beyond these corporations, with all their influence and power, and provide jobs."

Publishers Scored.

Another resolution declared freedom of the press was a "cornerstone of democracy" and charged that freedom was "really" being endangered by such tactics as the interference by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City in preventing the distribution of literature or other circulars by labor organizers and the injunctions issued by judges to prevent workers on strike from disclosing on the picket line the reasons for a strike."

Tom McCarthy

Ray Sells Shoelaces.

THIS MIGHT have been a sob story, if I'd picked anybody else but Ray. But he doesn't ask for any sympathy and, when you're through talking with him, you've room only for admiration.

McCARTHY.

He's 12 years old, healthy and a redhead. And his face is so well scrubbed that the freckles almost gleam. He's warmly dressed and you can't work up a tear in talking to him; because he doesn't talk that way. He's doing all right . . . selling shoelaces.

"No sir," he said, and he never neglects the "sir," "this was my own idea. Nobody sent me out into the street to sell laces. My folks held out against it.

"You see," he said, "things weren't going well at our house. We've never been on relief, but things were pretty bad. My dad is a printer and the best he could get was a couple of days a week . . . once in a while.

"Well, I saw how things were and I figured something ought to be done about it. First, I made up a shoeshine box, but my mother and dad didn't want me to go out with it. They said I wouldn't make any money. And that they didn't like the idea anyway.

"But I figured I knew a thing or two about business, so I put one over on them."

Ray put one over on them, as he says, by sneaking out with his shoeshine box . . . and staying out till he'd earned a pocketfull of change. Then he came home and laid $2.35 on the dining room table.

"After that," said the 12-year-old redhead, "they decided I knew what I was talking about."

Ray talks very much like a successful young businessman who, against the advice of his elders, took a plunge in the market with overwhelming success. From the shoeshine box, he advanced to specializing in laces.

* * * *

"DO YOU GET a chance to get your school work done?" I asked Ray.

"Sure," he said, "I do that when I get through at night. I usually get in about 8 or 9 o'clock. I've made it a rule never to go home until I've made $2. And I get some school work done. But I don't like it so much."

Ray is in the sixth grade, which isn't so bad for a boy of 12; though he admits that he lost one year in school through failure. His brother, however, who is now selling laces as well, is only in the third grade, though he's 11.

"I know this business now," Ray said, "and yet my brother is making more money than I am. But I guess it's just because he's got a better territory. He works Pennsylvania avenue between the Treasury and the White House. But I taught him his trade!"

"What sort of things did you teach him, Ray?"

"Oh, you know: how to sell, what people will buy and what people won't. For example, the women aren't as good customers as the men. Restaurants and bars are good places to sell laces because, I guess, when people are eating and enjoying themselves, they don't like to see other people working.

"One man in a restaurant bought all the laces in my box one night. I made $4 that day."

"How about the cops?"

"Oh they don't bother me," Ray said. "One time one of them told me I ought to get a license and I'm going to get one. I've filled out the card, already, but I haven't got around to getting it fixed up. That'll cost me a half a buck."

* * * *

RAY IS A NORMAL youngster. He doesn't like school too well. But he does enjoy reading. That's his favorite subject in school, too. He and his brother both go to St. Aloysius parochial school and begin their business day when school is out, at three.

His parents are both living, and he has another brother; just in the process of learning to talk.

Ray buys the laces at less than a penny a pair. He sells them for a dime, and claims that he makes at least $12 per week. His brother makes a little more. The money goes to the family, though both boys take a quarter a day for their own use. Ray claims he's saving 50 cents a week. He says he has $10 saved up now.

"What're you saving for, Ray?" I asked him.

"I want to get a 1937 Chevrolet," he said.

Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Winning Cards and Entries.

Continuing the discussion of entries, I want to distinguish between a winning card and an entry. Technically, any card which wins a trick is an entry, since it confers upon the winner of the trick the right to lead to the succeeding trick. In the experts' dictionary, however, the winning card is not an entry unless good use can be made of the right to lead at that particular time. In today's hand South made the mistake of taking one of dummy's winning cards before it could be used as an entry.

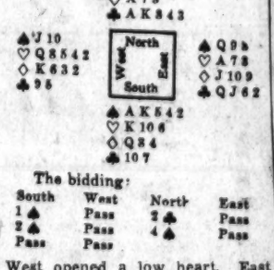
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened a low heart. East won with the Ace and returned the suit. South winning with his King. Without bothering to plan the play of the hand, South immediately ruffed his losing heart in the dummy; thus he made use of one of dummy's trumps as a winning card, and failed to make use of it as an entry. The right to lead from dummy at this point was valueless. Subsequently South lost two diamonds and a trump and, with them, his contract.

South should have seen that there was no hurry about ruffing his heart in dummy. He should have drawn two rounds of trumps. Two high clubs and a club ruff should have followed and then the heart should have been ruffed. At this stage the right to lead from dummy would have been valuable, since South could have ruffed another club, establishing dummy's thirteenth club. The Ace of diamonds would have furnished an entry for a discard on the thirteenth club. Thus South would have made his contract.

Singing Pickets Jailed en Masse At Ford Plant

C.I.O. Strikers in Kansas City Defy Police to Fill Every Cell in Prison.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Dec. 15.—Scores of singing, shouting men and women, some carrying or leading children, attempted mass picketing today at the Ford assembly plant and were arrested by police as fast as they appeared. Today's arrests totaled 140 men and 21 women.

A few pickets scuffled briefly with police on ice-coated streets and were carried, kicking and scratching, to patrol cars. The children, ranging from 5 to 12, were taken home by officers. The women and men were booked on charges of disturbing the peace and released.

Carl Stevens, an international representative of the C. I. O., said picketing attempts would be continued until "we have every jail in Kansas City filled."

More than 100 pickets were arrested at one time. No sooner were they hustled into patrol cars than other groups marched to the plant from headquarters of the United Automobile Workers of America across the street. The U. A. W. A., affiliate of the C. I. O., called a strike Friday, charging discrimination against union men.

Police Director Otto P. Higgins ordered all pickets arrested, saying his department agreed with Ford officials that there was no strike. H. C. Doss, plant manager, said today there were 1,055 workers in the plant, the largest number since the plant reopened after a seasonal layoff.

Before the reopening, Ford officials threatened to transfer the plant elsewhere unless they could be guaranteed adequate police protection and City Manager M. F. McElroy went to Detroit to assure Henry Ford personally he would get it.

Scott Is Willing To Amend D.C. 'Defender' Bill

Representative Scott (Democrat), of California, yesterday expressed a willingness to amend his District public defender bill to meet objections of "inadequacy" raised Tuesday night by the Junior Bar Association in approving the proposal in principle.

He said he would oppose, however, the suggestion of the legislative committee of the senior bar association that money should be appropriated for the use of the court in assigning indigent cases to private lawyers.

Scott said that he will seek approval of his bill, now pending before a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee, as soon as the regular session opens.

He said he had no objection to enlarging the staff of the public defender to add investigators, as suggested by the junior bar committee, headed by Frederick A. Ballard. That would raise the cost above the $20,000 now provided in the bill.

Meanwhile, Ballard said he will confer with E. Barrett Prettyman, chairman of the legislative committee of the senior bar association, in an effort to work out a compromise measure that may be agreeable to both factions.

Scott admitted the validity of the criticism of the senior bar association that one public defender and one assistant could not adequately handle indigent cases.

"My idea is to try the experiment with one public defender and an assistant for a year or so until we can ascertain just how many the District needs," he said. "The office can then be enlarged as necessary."

A companion bill, sponsored by Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, is pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Aged Woman Kills Grandson, Slashes Self With Razor

To prevent child welfare authorities from taking from her her 2-year-old great-grandson, Emma Horton, 83-year-old colored woman, slashed the child's throat with a razor yesterday and then attempted to take her own life with the same blade.

Police found the boy, Frederick, dead on the second floor of the house at 1621 Thirteenth street northwest. The woman was unconscious a short distance away.

At the time the woman was found, she was scheduled to appear in Juvenile Court for a hearing, as authorities of the Board of Public Welfare were attempting to regain custody of the child. He had been in their care until a short time ago. The boy's mother died when the baby was born.

The woman was taken to Gallinger Hospital. After receiving first aid she was transferred to the psychopathic ward for observation. Her condition was undetermined.

Shoppers Heed Plea To Take Own Bundles

Shoppers in Washington stores during the Christmas season apparently have been impressed with the advantages of carrying home their own bundles, Secretary Edward D. Shaw, of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday.

He explained that the widespread admonition of the "carry-your-small-packages-with-you" request is the result of an attempt on the part of the association to decrease the number of mistakes and disappointments which usually attend the rush of the closing days of every Christmas shopping period.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the sixth concert of the Stradivari Bicentennial Festival in the chamber music auditorium Wednesday afternoon, Rudolf Serkin and Adolf Busch playing four Beethoven sonatas for piano and violin: F major, Op. 24; A minor, Op. 23; A major and G major, Op. 30, Nos. 1 and 3.

Before an engrossed and keenly appreciative audience Rudolf Serkin and Adolf Busch resumed yesterday afternoon, with no diminution of the urgent vitality shown the night before, their feat of collaborative interpretation of the Beethoven sonatas for piano and violin. Dissimilar as these two artists are in their individual styles, they adopt them so admirably to a common purpose that the twain seem as one in esthetic opinion. And so positively do they state their agreement that their joint eloquence is highly stimulating.

The F major sonata, with which they began the program, has both in manner and material a most satisfying felicity, and is so securely scored for the instruments that the voice-blending is invariably fluent. With its nickname of the "Spring" sonata Beethoven had nothing to do, although he probably would not have objected to it, for the work is radiant with youthful spirit. The two allegros are filled with laughter, the scherzo is a little masterpiece of wit, and even the adagio smiles in its grave way.

Not so important a work, either in content or structure, is the A minor sonata, although it is distinguished by an unusual movement, the andante scherzoso, in which the somber and the gay are playfully united with delightful effect. Through the finale sweeps some of the dark fire which was to burn so fiercely later in the "Kreutzer" sonata.

The A major sonata from Opus 30 carries to perfection the ideal which Haydn had for the three-movement type; it is graceful, polished and even polite in its poetic compliments. It is a courtly companion for the "little" G major sonata, which has more rural manners. In the G major one feels a vernal freshness in the first movement, and exciting urban experience in the easy swaying Viennese rhythm of the minuet, and recollected merriment in the sparkling finale.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the second concert of the Beethoven Festival Wednesday night in Constitution Hall, with Josef Hofmann as soloist. Program: Overture to "Die Geschoepfe des Prometheus," Symphony No. 7 in A major, Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major.

Assuming the festival follows a design of cumulative importance, the Beethoven Festival of the National Symphony Orchestra is proceeding with complete accordance to plan, for last night's concert was on a distinctly higher plane than the one last Sunday. One reason for the elevation was the performance of the seventh symphony, which towers mountainously between the sixth and eighth; another was the presence of Josef Hofmann in the plentitude of his fiftieth anniversary on the concert stage, and the third was the resumption of the baton by Hans Kindler in an authoritative mood.

From the first chord of the "Prometheus" overture to the last chord of the concerto, the orchestra was metaphorically on its toes, playing at the peak of its ability and with fine responsiveness. The co-operation of the musicians with their director was whole-hearted, and as a result their playing had the lift and the surge of spontaneous emotion. The momentum of the music carried a large audience in a steadily increasing enthusiasm.

To speak of the last first, Josef Hofmann's splendid reading of the G major concerto was in itself enough to have stirred even a lethargic assemblage into excitement. His mastery of the piano was never put to more powerful or more subtle use. Most admirable was the manner in which he handled the dynamics of tone, loosing and curbing them with unerring judgment and taste. His conception of the work respected the mysterious quality of its beauty, and the eloquence of his phrasing left no poetic implication unexpressed. His performance will long be cherished in the memories of those who heard it.

Only one concerto by Mozart affords a precedent for the solo entrance of the piano in this concerto, and Beethoven made it much more impressive than his predecessor had done; the statement of the subject has a strangely arrecting effect, almost ominous in feeling. But the apprehension changes to delight as the orchestra continues the theme and the exposition broadens in expansiveness lovelieness.

The haunting slow movement, according to tradition, represents the supplications of Orpheus to the gods of the underworld. The analogy is certainly suggested by the alternation of the hushed and almost anguished phrases of the piano and the stern, adamantine answers of the orchestra. This dialogue is one of the most remarkable in musical literature.

Dr. Kindler's projection of the seventh symphony was irresistible in its vigor and its rhythmic urgency.

City Postoffice Set to Handle 2,000 an Hour

Burke Launches System to Speed Mailing of Packages.

A new system for handling Christmas packages of 2,000 persons hourly will be launched at the City Postoffice, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke announced yesterday.

At the same time, the postmaster said he had arranged special parking accommodations, so that patrons will be encouraged to use the main office rather than substations.

Eight units of three men each will speed up the mail, Burke asserted. Each unit will include one man to weigh packages, another to sell stamps and a third to issue insurance coupons. Thus, instead of the old system, where one man handled the job, the patron will stand in line until his turn comes, then be handled by the entire unit.

As soon as the man in charge of the scales weighs the package, the patron will step to the stamp and insurance sellers, thus speeding service three fold.

Similar schemes have been tried in other cities—notably New York, Cleveland, Chicago, and Pittsburgh, and have proved a decided success. Because space is limited, the plan will not be put into effect at substations.

"That is why we want to encourage people to use the main office," said Burke.

In order to facilitate mailing at the main office, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer has set a 15-minute parking limit in the vicinity of the postoffice. Special police will supervise parking.

At the same time Burke announced that starting Sunday night a special midnight collection would be made nightly, thereby getting tens of thousands of packages to their destinations ahead of time. The special collections will cease after December 23.

3 Places Robbed, 2 Purses Snatched

Purse snatchers and holdup men were active in the District last night, with at least four persons their victims.

Bessie Carpel, of 637 Irving street northwest, was held up by a colored man who had knocked at her door shortly after dark. Brandishing a pistol, the bandit demanded money. Mrs. Carpel gave the robber her purse, which contained $2.

A colored bandit who ordered chops, then whipped out a revolver, got $42 from the cash register of the grocery store of Samuel Crowell, 45, 1401 Fifth street northwest.

As she was walking in the 2000 block of H street northwest, a colored man snatched her purse containing $28, Mrs. Lillian Welch, of 2121 H street northwest reported.

Comfort For Aggressors.

Those 218 Congressmen who signed Representative Louis Ludlow's petition regarding the war referendum amendment to the Constitution no doubt acted on the assumption that they were doing something which might do some good and could do no harm.

Before the Ludlow resolution can become part of the supreme law it must secure a two-thirds majority in both houses of Congress and be approved by three-fourths of the States. The process may take years and there is infinitely greater likelihood that the measure will be rejected than that it will be approved.

The more cynical among the signers of the Ludlow petition realize this. They feel, therefore, that while doing nothing to change the existing provision vesting Congress with the sole right to declare war, they have given a sop to peace sentiment in their communities.

But the apparent harmlessness of the Ludlow proposal is an illusion. For the successful move to get that measure out of committee coincided with a very strong and wholly justified note from the United States to Japan regarding the Panay incident.

The Ludlow resolution is certain to encourage the Japanese militarists to proceed on their course of provocation, regardless of any sweeping apologies that the Japanese government may see fit to make. It will lead these militarists to assume, quite wrongly, that in the face of Congressional pacifist sentiment in Congress the President will be hamstrung in his efforts to protect our legitimate interests in the Far East.

In this respect, as with reference to the enactment of our dangerous neutrality law, the pacifists in Congress continue to be the best possible friends and allies of the militarists. They are prepared to give Japan carte blanche to go ahead with her plans on the peace of the world secure in the feeling that the greatest and most powerful nation on earth will do nothing but say nay.

The essential absurdity of the Ludlow proposal is clearly brought out in the Panay incident itself. When wantonly attacked by Japanese bombers the crew of the American gunboat fought back. Had the terms of a Ludlow amendment on the books they should have held their fire until after a referendum had taken place throughout the length and breadth of the United States.

The Public Defender.

Ideally, a district attorney would be a calm man dominated by a passion for justice. Practically, because his success is frequently measured by the number of convictions he can win, an elected district attorney is too often merely a public prosecutor nursing political ambitions.

The result is that defendants must have counsel to protect their interests in court. Many, however, lack the means to employ a lawyer. To assist them, the courts generally assign volunteer attorneys. Often the volunteer is inexperienced or conscienceless, in the latter case prone to milk friends and relatives of the indigent defendant. As an alternative, the office of "public defender" has been created by six States and a score or more of cities.

Senator Capper and Representative Scott would give the District a similar office. After careful study of their bills, however, the District Bar Association has disapproved them as inadequate. Nonetheless, on recommendation of a special junior committee, the association has approved the principle of the public defender.

It will now be the task of the committee to suggest revisions for the Capper and Scott bills. This is an appropriate assignment. The public defender is a liberal concept and thus properly put to practice by the younger lawyers who lead in advocating the development here. That they will not lack in mature advice is indicated by the fact that the District Police Court bench has approved the idea. The Judicial Conference, comprising the Chief Justice of the United States and the senior judges of the circuit courts of appeals, has also recommended public defenders for Federal judicial districts, where warranted.

What Japan Wants To Know.

A naval demonstration in Far Eastern waters, now being informally discussed in Washington, would undoubtedly give the Japanese militarists pause for thought, particularly if carried out in overwhelming force by joint action of Nine-Power Treaty signatories. It would have been happier, however, if that step had been taken before Japan became involved up to her neck in the war with China.

If a combined fleet of American, British and French warships had steamed to Shanghai when the Japanese first forced hostilities in North China, that great international port would never have been attacked; no drive would have been made on Nanking; the Panay would not have been bombed, and the present very dangerous tension between Japan and the United States would not exist. It is precisely because we did not consider collective action to preserve peace that we are now having to contemplate acting alone at the risk of war.

Nobody knows this better than the Japanese, whose aim to keep all their possible antagonists separated is so greatly assisted by the emotional pacifism and "British chestnuts" argument in this country. "Divide and rule" was the Japanese motto when they seized Manchuria. They rely on the same technique to carry through the vastly more ambitious project of Asiatic conquest on which they are now embarked.

This becomes more clear as the evidence on the sinking of the Panay accumulates. Increasingly the reports indicate that this outrage was deliberately planned and ruthlessly carried out with the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the United States would accept the insult; whether we would show resentment single-handed, or whether we would combine with other affronted powers in that collective action which is the one form of opposition the Japanese have reason to fear. Tokyo is doubtless well satisfied that there is as yet small indication of the latter course.

Just before Japan launched hostilities in North China she produced "incidents" on the Amur River cleverly calculated to test out the Russian reaction. Finding Russia undisposed to resist, because of the internal dissensions on which Tokyo has shrewdly capitalized, the Japanese sprung their mine. Finding British, French and American sentiment equally pacific, they soon extended the field of invasion to Shanghai and Nanking. Further plans, undoubtedly contingent on our reaction to the Panay incident, will in due course be disclosed.

Japan's devious record in the past six years would alone make it reasonable to take her profuse diplomatic apologies about the Panay bombing with a heavy dose of salt. And aside from the record there is the fact that these apologies have been far too profuse, and far too prompt, to be really impressive. It is almost as though the regrets had been prepared in advance and placed in the telegraphers' hands awaiting only the overt act in order to be dispatched. Moreover, the most vital American demand—guarantees against repetition of such attacks—significantly remains unanswered.

At Brussels the signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty definitely ascertained that Japan would not mediate her dispute with China, but would on the contrary proceed with her plan to dismember and subjugate that nation. It is not at all impossible that the Panay was selected for destruction in order to ascertain definitely whether the United States intends to follow up the steps taken at Brussels, or to let the aggressor pursue an unhindered course.

While reaching conclusions on this, Tokyo will for some days be full of honeyed words toward the United States, and a temporary truce to the activities of Japan's air force may also be expected. That should fool nobody. The one immediate issue is what guarantees Japan has to offer regarding the protection of American interests in China. And the one underlying issue is the consistency of these guarantees with the explicit terms of the Nine-Power Treaty which this country sponsored here in Washington.

What the Japanese are working for is the continued separation of all opponents of their murderous and wholly illegal attack on China. If they find that they can attack American and British gunboats without bringing concerted efforts to check their course, they will have found out exactly what they want to know.

Challenge To Science.

Though the Scriptures overlook the point, it is always more satisfactory if someone else will lift the bushel from your light. Accordingly, we were delighted when Dr. Millikan, speaking at the Town Hall last Sunday, remarked that newspapers are doing more than the colleges to educate America in political fundamentals. It was also appealing to hear him dispatch those who, with barrel-like roars and corollary emptiness, damn scientific progress for the temporary unemployment it must occasionally create.

But, at this season of the year, Dr. Millikan could have done more than defend science against charges of technological unemployment. This Nobel prize winner might agreeably have applied the scientific method to problems aroused by the seasonal employment of extra Christmas clerks.

There i no disparagement of their willingness or potential abilities. But many of them undoubtedly add to the confusion which attends distilling of the Christmas spirit. They snarl the tissues in their charge books. They're sorry, but they don't carry that model in blue, even though you've just seen it in the window. And they'll never quote a price without first checking with "Mr. Lemke," who is invariably at the opposite end of the department.

High Prices And Recession.

In his address before the American Farm Bureau Federation, Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, took a strong stand against policies that tend unduly to raise prices and restrict production. He expressed the hope that businessmen would recognize that "their long-run interests are bound up with the largest possible volume of production at the lowest possible prices." He also warned labor that "advances in wages which are in excess of increasing productivity and result in increased prices react against labor itself, as well as against the community at large."

Mr. Eccles rejects inflationary short cuts to a revival of business and pleads for moderate price policies to keep increases in production costs from outstripping consumer purchasing power. However, in addition to measures designed to sustain buying power and production, he points to the need of impetus to expansion of industrial activity. For that purpose he looks chiefly to the building industry, stressing the joint responsibility of business and labor organizations "to serve their own and the public interest by doing what they can to reduce unit costs and in this way increase their aggregate returns."

No doubt Mr. Eccles is right in assuming that overrapid advances in prices and production costs last spring created maladjustments leading to the current business recession. But he is certainly not warranted in attributing entire responsibility for the development to antisocial private interests. Such a version of the course of events ignores the effect of the Administration's agricultural policies, which have contributed to scarcity and high prices of farm products. It disregards labor policies that have encouraged demands for higher pay and fewer hours of work, and it fails to consider the price-raising effects of deficit financing.

Furthermore, Mr. Eccles appears to underrate the difficulties in the way of adjusting prices to consumer purchasing power, even assuming that labor and capital are willing to co-operate. The Government itself is constantly adding to the regulatory laws that interfere with the free functioning of the price system. For example, the Bituminous Coal Commission has just announced increases in coal prices that will, it is estimated, add over $20,000,000 to the operating costs of our hard-pressed railways.

These conflicts of interest merely illustrate the inextricable complexities of the price structure and the virtual impossibility of planned adjustments that would provide the kind of balanced relationship between prices and consumer buying power for which Mr. Eccles pleads. We already have a great body of antitrust legislation that, in the name of competition, actually operates to make the price system more rigid. If the farm bill and the wages-and-hours bill pass, the price structure will become more and more rigid and production costs will become less and less adjustable to varying conditions.

There are honest differences of opinion as to whether the public interest is served or injured by Government intervention. But there can be no doubt that the Government must share responsibility with private industry and labor for the price maladjustments of the prerecession months.

For All To See.

There is something very decent about most human beings. And they cause ever so many good deeds to shine in a naughty world.

In New Orleans a 62-year-old man has offered his left eye to the surgeons so that they may endeavor to restore the sight of a boy of 19. The youth's eyes were burned by lime dust and the injury, the doctors say, can only be remedied by the transplanting of a new cornea.

The sexagenarian has heart disease but his heart nonetheless seems to be in the right place. He modestly belittles his offer by declaring that his eye is of little use to him as he has "not far to go."

There seems to be a moral here for the man who has not yet contributed to the fund for the needy.

Here and there you will find an individual who will part with a dollar as cheerfully as he would with his left eye. All he needs is to be approached in the right way; with, let us say, a club.

But people generally need no prompting in the performance of acts of kindness. For there is something very decent about most human beings.

Teasingly, the President said the Vice President didn't really kill a wild deer. Garner might retort that the Wall street bear which Roosevelt reportedly killed some time ago has in recent months been cavorting around pretty lively for a corpse.

The American Automobile Association says a man can park a car properly, but that a woman cannot. How does the A. A. A. know? Has any woman ever tried to park a car properly?

"Sleeping in a tree will cure insomnia," says a physician. So, for that matter, will sleeping in bed.

Pegler's 'Poker Game.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Pegler in his piece "Poker Game" compares our society to a poker game in which two rich guys invite four penniless guys to play with them, and the rich fellows even give the poor boys money to play with (this is represented as sheer good-hearted voluntary taxation, merely to make a game, merely to sort of find something to do, to kill time and keep going.

With this stage-setting and characterization of the operative forces of our society, Mr Pegler proceeds to unfold to us in his usual cryptic and stylish lingo the self-sacrificing, magnanimous and paternalistic qualities of the two little rich fellows and the utter rascality and impudence of the four poor and thankless have-nots. Then, to make his society thoroughly complete, Mr. Pegler does not forget to bring in the strong-arm men, who naturally demand their share. And, to top it all, Culture, too, in the form of statues in the hallways, springs up in this sloughy society to further oppress our poor rich guys and to gnaw at their pocketbooks. There, says Mr. Pegler, is a true picture of capitalism, a critique of communism, a boo for the C. I. O. and the New Deal.

Not a word about the fact that the rich might have come here two or three or four hundred years ago and got hold for themselves of all the rich fertile land, of the land with oil, gold and coal and iron in it. And how were the takings of the game divided? What happened? The labor of the poor brought forth from the soil and mountains and rivers immense riches—for the rich. In return the poor received a mere pittance in wages. The rich had built for themselves mansions, the poor were disposed to hovels. The rich wear silks and sables, the poor must be grateful for rags. And now they are even denied the right to play at the game, even for a pittance. They have produced too much and so they must starve.

There was a day when Pegler felt with keen senses the daily struggles, suffering and plight of humanity in its present constituted order of rich and poor. And he gave us a vivid portrayal of his reflections. Then he was recognized and remunerated and remunerated, until he became rich and fell out. Now he can only see the rich, and they are the only good, for he is among them.

Lack of Confidence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lack of confidence in the Democratic Party is the sole cause of the present prolonged depression. Where have these vast sums of money, now so widely proclaimed, been during the past five years; and why have they not been put to work?

Hoover was not responsible for the previous depression and if re-elected in 1932 it would have disappeared and been a thing of the past long ere this.

Roosevelt chose a circuitous route in which to reach his goal. He has gone just one year too far in the wrong direction, and will have to do some hop, skipping and jumping in the next three years to get back to where he started, and without having accomplished anything worth while. He is now lost in the jungle and cannot find his way back without the co-operation of those whom he has defiled.

Another Virginian.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reply to the letter signed "Virginian" in The Post of December 10, I would like to say that I was born and reared near that locality and fully understand what Edith Maxwell was up against. I know just the type of people who condemned her to serve 20 years in prison because she had done something to elevate her above the common herd, something which they could not understand and would not tolerate. To condemn such a girl was a worse crime than the one she committed, for I believe it was an accident and done in self-defense and might have well been the other way around if her drunken father had had his way. I know many of his type—their brains befogged by moonshine liquor all the time and their ideas of how to treat womenfolks taken from the Dark Ages.

If benighted fathers are going to be allowed to threaten grown-up daughters who are earning their own living to the extent that they have to kill their parents in self-defense, the daughters should at least be assured of a fair trial, which Edith did not get to my way of thinking.

Road Fund Reductions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading your editorial, "Sabotaging Economy," in The Post of December 12, I am impelled to call your attention to an editorial by William Chevalier in the December 9 issue of the Engineering News-Record, in which he states that the highway appropriations are more than covered by the taxes imposed upon the users of the highways. Since Col. Chevalier, besides being an executive of Engineering News-Record, is also president of the American Road Builders Association, it seems to me he should be in a very good position to be sure of his facts.

Whatever credence may be placed in Mr. Chevalier's statements, I know, as does every other motorist, that I am paying from 3 cents to 6 cents taxes on every gallon of gasoline I buy, or a minimum of about $20 a year. This tax was originally imposed solely for the purpose of building and maintaining roads, but we have seen more and more of it diverted to other uses. Unless the idea now is to make a further diversion to help balance the budget, it seems to me it would have been only fair for the President to have included in his recommendation to Congress the removal of the Federal portion of this tax.

Now that the time has come to take thought to revise the spending policies of the Government, it seems to me peculiar that the first subject of retrenchment should be, not the boondoggling items, but the comparatively insignificant item of $200,000,000 for public highways which the country certainly needs, and for which the highway users are themselves paying. We are still faced with billion-dollar appropriations for relief and "make-work" projects, and I fail to see any gain to the taxpayers in the cutting down of this appropriation, the greater part of which goes to labor.

The District Lunacy Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. Overholser recommends reform of the District lunacy laws. The reform is needed not in the law but the perverted administration of the law by the District authorities assisted by the doctors, not through malice but ignorance.

As an attorney I have had occasion to point this out to the District authorities, doctors of Gallinger Hospital and St. Elizabeths and to the court. When it is seen that the court is about to take proper action for the application of the law as it actually is, the Commissioners generally withdraw their petition and the prisoner is released without a written precedent being created. Very few, however, in such a position are represented by competent attorneys.

The law as it stands is reasonable and proper and the "barbarities" complained of are a direct and necessary result of distorted administration. The law does not, and never has, admitted the right of the state to incarcerate the harmless insane—the "mentally sick" under the prevalent term. In such a case the law will step in, on proper application, and if the subject is found not only mentally abnormal but sufficiently so to render him incompetent to manage his own affairs, guardians of his affairs and property are appointed. That is all. The State has no more right to deprive such a person of liberty than one suffering from chronic indigestion; nor has he unless indigent any more right to free treatment by the State.

The State has the right to incarcerate any person who is dangerous to life or property whether he be sane or insane. In either case the initial step is the arrest for an offense committed under the general laws, for how else can such danger be known or proved. Yet there is an addition to this in the case of one showing those clear symptoms of dangerous insanity which are known to all doctors and which may evidence themselves before any actual overt act. In such a case, two impartial doctors, not employed by the State, may sign a certificate, under oath, that they believe the man a dangerous lunatic and thereupon he may be detained and held for observation and, if necessary after observation, appearance before a jury.

This jury is the only protection of the sane man. And it is better that 1,000 persons actually suspect of dangerous lunacy be displayed in public than that one sane man be railroaded to the asylum in a star chamber proceeding; as well say abolish the open court and jury system altogether so that innocent men should not have to be embarrassed by defending themselves in public.

I dare say that Dr. Overholser would agree that over half the present inmates of St. Elizabeths are not suspected of dangerous tendencies. It is because of them that St. Elizabeths is overcrowded. Each one of them is illegally detained there from that moment when his lack of danger is known. And most of them are not indigent, which constitutes a petty graft on the District by their families—one which in total is not so petty.

Here is a typical and actual case. A man of good habits had a severe disappointment. He started drinking too much, but was otherwise normal. His wife agreed with their doctor that he should be removed from temptation. The doctor, a reputable one, said he could fix it up at no cost for treatment. He made affidavit that the man was a dangerous lunatic. The policeman on the beat, after the doctor explained matters and that he had taken the man to Gallinger while intoxicated, executed another affidavit required by law that he had apprehended the man as a dangerous lunatic. The wife signed a "blank" without reading it but which was a similar affidavit.

The man woke up and found he was not in a normal hospital but under restraint. He demanded release and became, normally, I should say, abusive and obstreperous. He was tied down hand and foot with a hang-over, no cigarettes and no drink. He was maintained in this condition for some time when a doctor examined him and his remarks made under such conditions made note of and quoted in court as proof of insanity. The examining doctor, contrary to law, thereupon made another affidavit to the effect the man was a dangerous lunatic—he was shipped to St. Elizabeths.

Prior to his final commitment he had to be brought into court. And the facts I have above stated were the facts as freely and openly admitted on cross examination on the stand by the wife, the doctor and the policeman. They were not reticent, for they were conscious of no wrong—they all thought they were being "helpful and cutting a little red tape."

Had the man not had a lawyer—and most of them do not—St. Elizabeths would have had another permanent patient. Last but not least, how about the many cases where the above routine is a cloak for the immolation of a sane man for reasons of malice or avarice. It is common knowledge that they are in jurisdictions where opportunity presents. Therefore the jury.

Bones.

ONE hot summer evening about eight years ago, a shaggy brown and black, stubble-tailed airedale wandered into our backyard and there settled himself under a bush for a long, long snooze. For two days, at least, he remained there, sleeping the sleep of the weary, too tired even to bark. It seemed as though he had been on a long journey and was exhausted from his travels. In fact, we thought at first that he was an old man, as dogs go, though subsequently we revised our opinion. Our efforts to locate his owner were to no avail.

Gradually, after being fed, he regained his strength, found his bark, and forthright wheedled his way into our hearts.

Such was the coming of Bones.

* * *

He was a handsome dog, this airedale. His soulful brown eyes radiated kindness and intelligence; though his stance and build suggested a pugilist, as he walked abroad as if with a chip on his shoulder, snorting defiance to all comers. When he came to us hardly a tooth in his black mouth remained intact; all were broken or chipped, presumably a result of his battles.

While in some cases the fighting strain in a dog serves to make a mean animal, this was never the case with Bones. Rather, his tempered aggressiveness gave an air of nobility and self-confidence that one could only admire. It gave an impression of power and stability, never of viciousness.

We had great times together, that dog and I. Wherever I went, he followed. He was a constant companion on long hikes out through the reservoir woods and down to the canal. He loved to run and frisk, and sometimes he would race way ahead, and I wouldn't see a trace of him for half an hour or so, though I'm sure he never lost scent of me. Suddenly, perhaps, I would hear him barking furiously off in a distant thicket.

"Bones has caught something," I would think. But if he had, it always got away, for I never saw him bring anything back.

But I must admit that it was his missie that he liked best. She was the meal ticket, and he knew it. A single word from her would make that old bobtail wag more furiously than a whole sentence from me.

* * *

As the years passed, Bones' character mellowed considerably and he grew more and more like a grand old man, or an aging teddy bear. His fighting days became but a memory; and he clung closer to the hearth. He grew fatter and less active, but still seemed to have plenty of life left in him.

He had one very bad habit . . . a magnetic impulse to chase moving automobiles; and I always had an idea that some day the careening wheel of a car would be just a little faster than he was. But his demise was fated to be more painful, and of a slower nature.

Last week, the vet came with his little motorcycle ambulance and carried Bones away. It was such a little cage for a big, sick airedale to squeeze into. His missie winced with the thought of the jouncing that he would get before the ride was over.

"Wouldn't it be better to hire a cab?" she asked. We have no car. But I talked her out of the idea.

"What difference does it make," I said stoically, "in a few hours he'll be dead, and a little discomfort before that won't make much difference." Besides, the vet was there waiting to carry him away.

We had done all we could for the old fellow. He was just a goner, that was all. At first, he started to cry out every time we touched him around his throat and, at length, to cry as though in terrible pain even when no one touched him. So we had a vet look him over. That was vet No. 1, a pleasant young fellow who looked as though he ought to know his business, and it was his opinion that the old dog was just putting on a bluff act to evoke sympathy and petting. But we knew it wasn't so. Bones was no cry-baby. So, despite the avowals of the young doctor that it was not worth while, we had him take the dog to his hospital for a week's observation.

* * *

At the end of a week, we brought him home with a camphor-soaked bandage around his neck, and with the young vet still maintaining that there was nothing seriously wrong with the pooch, except perhaps slightly swollen tonsils. That was the first time we had ever heard that dogs had tonsils.

For another couple of weeks after coming back from the hospital, Bones moped around the house and acted altogether miserable, refusing food, and seeming to get worse day by day. At last came the time when he couldn't even stand on his feet.

That was when we called in vet No. 2, a man of many years' experience, who was excusably peeved to learn that he was only playing second fiddle, so to speak. It was he who pronounced the death penalty on the old boy. The pain from which Bones had been suffering, he explained, was caused by a maligaant growth in his neck, something which could never in the world be cured. There was only one decent thing to do.

We told him to give us a little time to think it over.

However, as more days passed it became increasingly apparent that the old dog was in agony, and we knew then that we had a duty to a creature who could not speak for himself. So we called up the vet and told him to send over the ambulance. ROBERT SULLIVAN.

Open Shop Duel

By Elmer T. Peterson.

Los Angeles Vs. Dave Beck.

Los Angeles.

THE LONG-EXPECTED major invasion of Los Angeles by the Dave Beck element of organized labor was begun the second week in December when principal stores were picketed to prevent delivery trucks from operating.

Dave Beck, who, as head of the teamsters' union, at Seattle, has been the dominant figure for the A. F. of L. on the West Coast, has been successful in bringing Seattle under his thumb. He also has kept the San Francisco area pretty well subjugated, when not being messed up by Bridges, of the C. I. O.

In one sense his blow at the mercantile deliveries was a shrewd one, for transportation is the Achilles' heel of the employers and the open shop for which Los Angeles has been noted ever since the days of Harrison Grey Otis.

In another sense it was bad strategy, for the Los Angeles Times, once published by Otis and now owned by Harry Chandler, instantly dramatized the situation by printing broadsides which accused Dave Beck of attempting to "kill Santa Claus" by paralyzing deliveries of Christmas presents.

This counter-attack was calculated to arouse the rank and file of Los Angeles citizenry against the ruthlessness of such warfare and its effect upon the general public. The counter-attack was a combination of the forces of Los Angeles businessmen, newspapers and a city administration which is generally disposed to prevent violent picketing and other forms of coercion.

• • • •

THE ANSWER of the open-shop advocates was successful—at least temporarily. After a few days of skirmishing, including the passage of a more drastic antipicketing ordinance, by the city authorities, Dave Beck called off his pickets "until after the holidays," so there is now an armed truce, with both sides sharply eyeing each other.

There seemed to be little doubt that the public generally was hostile to the Dave Beck forces, and he bowed to public opinion.

The crisis thus prematurely precipitated has been anticipated for a long time. The Los Angeles Times, as journalistic leader of the open-shop forces, has published thousands of columns telling what Dave Beck has done to Seattle and San Francisco, and warning the southern California people as to what they may expect if the closed shop is made effective here.

Labor forces are bitter against the Times, and claim that it is unfair. However, it is not likely that anyone—friend or foe—would deny that the Times has furnished leadership for the open-shop fight such as has seldom been seen anywhere in the country. Much of the animus for the Times' tactics, of course, goes away back to the dynamiting of the old Times Building and the killing of several persons because of its attitude toward union labor—a tragedy which startled and shocked the Nation shortly after the turn of the century.

LOS ANGELES is undoubtedly the last metropolitan stronghold of the open shop on the West Coast, and if Beck chooses to open up aggressively after the holidays, as he indicates, there will undoubtedly be one of the greatest battles ever fought between the open and closed shop in America.

The chamber of commerce and other businessmen's groups are pretty generally lined up for the open shop and are prepared to make the fight, even at great cost. They have seen what labor paralysis has done to San Francisco, Seattle and Portland, and are determined to escape what they believe to be a calamity in the form of a closed shop. On the other hand, the A. F. of L. forces, captained by Beck, of Seattle, believe that they can never be sure of their strength on the West Coast unless they have Los Angeles tightly organized.

The Beck forces, presumably, count on the friendliness of the National Administration toward organized labor. The situation at Seattle was tightly sewed up with the implied approval of the Department of Labor and the President, and Beck doubtless figures that this approval will extend to southern California. One fly in the ointment, however, is the C. I. O., which has put on a vigorous internal fight, greatly embarrassing the A. F. of L. in its various strongholds.

Another factor which, of course, may operate strongly against the Beck organization, is the business recession which has tended to make the general public jittery whenever strikes are mentioned. It is felt that business has enough troubles these days without being harassed by a labor war.

Department Store Santa At Home.

Santa—Boy, am I all in!

The wife—Did you have a hard day?

Santa—I must have shaken hands with a million kids.

The wife—You'd squawk about how you were overworked, no matter how soft your job was.

The wife—Sympathy for what? All you do is dress up in a red suit, put on some false whiskers and spend the day being good-natured, which, I admit, in your case is a struggle.

Santa—Oh, yeah! Well, I don't hear no complaints about my good nature except when I get home.

The wife—You may not be fooling all those strangers as much as you think.

Santa—I betcha five hundred mothers a day come to me and tell me I'm doin' swell.

The wife—I took a peek at you in that store the other day, and you had your whiskers on so cockeyed you couldn't have fooled a quintuplet.

The wife—Why should I? After all, they're yours, not mine!

• • • •

Santa—Well, how about some eats?

The wife—I'll bite; how about 'em?

Santa—Whaddaya mean? Where's my dinner?

The wife—The grocer just shut down on us. He said no more credit until you paid what you owed him.

Santa—I'll fix that guy!

The wife—He says he wrote you two weeks ago, saying he'd have to have some dough. Didn't you get his letter?

Santa—Sure, I got it.

The wife—Well, what happened?

Santa—I, er, I, well, I forgot it.

The wife—You better not let all those kids at the department store know that you don't pay no more attention to letters than that!

• • • •

Santa (guiltily)—Lay off, will ya?

The wife—I'm telling you, you better run down to the butcher and pay him something on account.

Santa—Have you got any money?

The wife—No; it must have been some other chimney.

Santa—I'll promise him something.

Santa—Why not?

New Province For Japan

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai, Nov. 24 (By Mail).

CULMINATING a two-month campaign of unprecedented severity, Japanese troops on November 6 captured the walled city of Taiyuan, capital of the strategically important Shansi Province.

The victory, although obscured by the Chinese army's spectacular resistance in the Shanghai area, cast a shadow upon the future conduct of Sino-Japanese hostilities in North China and thus upon the entire course of the war.

For the Chinese, the loss of Taiyuan was a major disaster, comparable only to the Japanese occupation of Peiping or Chapei. To the Japanese, the victory signified the attainment, within a comparatively short period of time, of one of their major goals in North China.

Geographically and topographically, Shansi can neither be a bulwark for the provinces of Hopei (which includes (Peiping), Chahar and Suiyuan, or a dangerous wedge, which may be driven either south, into the province of Honan, or west, into China's northwestern provinces of Shensi and Kansu.

With the loss of Shansi, the Chinese must virtually abandon hope for regaining control of the Peiping-Tientsin area within the near future. They must also now take extraordinary precautions to protect their northwestern and central provinces from possible Japanese attacks.

Victory Forestalls Chinese Counterattack.

THE JAPANESE, on the other hand, by their audacious but costly drive into Shansi, have attained a number of objectives, perhaps the most important of which was to make their newly gained territory secure from a Chinese counter-offensive.

With Shansi in their hands, the Japanese have gained undisputed control of the entire north and have established a buffer between their new possessions and the rest of the country.

Freed of the threat of a sudden flank movement, the Japanese army is now able to pursue practically unhindered its political, military and economic schemes in the newly conquered area. Moreover, with their base in Shansi the Japanese are now able to sever direct contact between China and the Outer Mongolian Soviet Republic and will, undoubtedly, soon launch a new campaign to cut off connection between China and the Soviet-dominated province of Sinkiang, through which Moscow could, if it so desired, supply Nanking with the badly needed arms and ammunition.

From Shansi, the Japanese army will be in a position to deal a flank blow on the great cotton-producing province of Shantung, whose canny warlord, Gen. Han Fu-chu, is apparently still straddling the fence. It is possible that the mere threat of such a thrust will aid Gen. Han to make up his mind.

These are all possibilities. Their transition to certainty is blocked by the unknown quantity of the northern political situation—the Communist armies.

Red Armies In Position In Mountains Since 1934.

FORESEEING the impending conquest of North China by the Japanese, the Communist command in 1934 moved all Red armies out of their strongholds in the mountains of central China to the northwest. In this barren region the Communists remained until early this year, when an understanding was reached with the Nanking government for joint resistance to Japan.

A few weeks after the outbreak of the Lukouchiao Incident, on July 7, 1937, the Red armies were already on the march toward Hopei, where they intended to launch a guerrilla war in which they have no equal in the world

Before the Communists reached their goal, however, a major part of Hopei was already under Japanese domination. Consequently, the Reds decided to establish their base in the rugged mountains of northern Shansi, whence they could stage lightning raids upon Japanese garrisons and supply trains in Shansi, Suiyuan, Chahar and western Hopei.

The meeting of the two forces could have scarcely been more dramatic. On the one hand there were about 50,000 ragged men, armed mainly with rifles and machine guns and inadequately supplied with ammunition, but strong in the conviction that they formed the last barrier between civilization and the Japanese juggernaut. On the other hand there were about 20,000 perfectly equipped men, moving at a rapid pace in motor lorries, plentifully supplied with arms and ammunition and advancing only when the way was paved by a fierce artillery and aerial bombardment.

Face to face in these forbidding mountains met Gens. Mao Tze-tung and Chu Teh, the apostles of Chinese communism, and Gens. Itagaki and Suzuki, whose names in the past four or five years have become synonymous with Japanese armed adventures on the mainland.

It was largely a clash between spirit and a military machine, and it took the latter two months to batter down the Red barrier. In the vicinity of Hsinkow, about 40 miles from Taiyuan, the Japanese tide finally broke through the Communist dike and rolled down unhindered into the plains of central Shansi.

An important factor in the crumbling of the Communist defenses was the fall of the Niangtzekwan, a strong mountain pass on the border of Shansi and Hopei, whose defenders held up the Japanese advances until they were forced to retreat by a flanking movement.

A part of the Communist force was taken off the northern front and rushed east in a futile effort to stem the Japanese advance. It was too late. Pursued by hundreds of army planes, shelled day and night by the Japanese long-range artillery, the retreating Chinese troops were given no opportunity to make a stand.

AFTER the collapse of Communist resistance, Taiyuan fell in a phenomenally brief time. Reports leaking through the air-tight censorship indicated, in fact, that the Chinese made but a feeble effort to defend the city from the Japanese onslaught. Leaving behind a small force for rear-guard action, the main body of the Shansi troops retreated to the southwest literally under a hail of bombs.

The Shansi chapter of the Sino-Japanese war made sorry reading. For provincialism, cowardice and inefficiency it rivaled the tragi-comical developments of the first fortnight of the war. For human suffering it had no parallel.

One after another, impregnable positions were handed over to the Japanese with only a pretense at resistance. One after another the guilty commanders of Chansi troops were court-martialed and shot, but that made little difference in the course of the war.

The Japanese entry into Shansi was incredibly easy. Having captured Chahar Province within a fortnight, mainly as the result of the provincial war lords' reluctance to allow the central government's troops into their pastures, the Japanese next turned west, into Suiyuan.

Leaving the task of subjugating this province to their Mongolian and Manchurian allies, the Japanese then suddenly veered southward, toward the double barrier protecting Shansi from invasion—the Great Wall and a mountain range.

What followed was little short of a debacle. Provincial jealousy, treason, lack of necessary equipment and absolute absence of co-ordination between various Chinese units combined to allow a numerically small Japanese detachment to capture the nearly impregnable Yenmen Pass.

The heroic defense of the Nankow Pass earlier in the war by a small Chinese unit against an overwhelmingly larger force equipped with all modern weapons showed that given an even break the Chinese could hold the Japanese at bay.

But at Yenmen—probably one of the strongest defense positions in the world—the order to retreat was given by the commander of the Chinese force even before the Japanese had assembled a force sufficiently strong to attack the pass. The commander was later tried and shot. But the fall of Yenmen spelled the doom of Shansi.

Next fell Tatung, the second largest city in the province. The Japanese promptly created a Peace Maintenance Commission, at whose head, in the absence of a better qualified man, was placed a butcher, who for the occasion donned the unaccustomed formal long black gown.

Aided by another column, which pierced the Shansi border from the northeast, the main Japanese force then began its relentless drive toward Taiyuan which was checked only when the Communists entered the fray.

Communist Leaders Given Slight Support By Chinese.

THE RED ARMIES—and this is a fact which is already beginning to get the public airing it deserves—received no adequate assistance in arms, ammunition and other military supplies from the Nanking government, which fears and suspects its new allies of ulterior designs.

The villains of the piece, however, were Shansi's provincially minded authorities, which emphatically rejected Nanking's belated offers to send its troops north. Instead, they preferred to recall henchmen in Suiyuan, thus leaving open the latter to the Japanese attackers.

Moreover, although the campaign was expected to be sanguinary, the provincial authorities made no timely preparations for the crisis. The provincial army lacked both military supplies and medical attention. In one of the most poignant stories that has emerged out of the present war, Agnes Smedley, shortly before the fall of Taiyuan, described how 30,000 wounded men starved, froze, suffered and died on the road between Taiyuan and the Shansi-Honan border.

Where 800 wounded men stood in line to have their blood-soaked bandages changed, there were bandages for only 200 and a solitary intern made a brave attempt to stretch these to the maximum. Other men died almost within sight of hospitals on the other side of a river, while all available junks were used for the transportation of merchandise. And at railway stations, huge crowds of sympathizers looked at the wounded men with sorrowful eyes, but no one brought the suffering men food and water.

But, withal, the Japanese will make a bad mistake if they start counting their chickens at this time. They have defeated the Communist armies, but they have not destroyed them. Taking refuge in the mountains north and southeast of Taiyuan, the Reds will continue to harass the Japanese troops.

It is highly probable that the Communists will extend their activities even to the neighboring provinces of Suiyuan and Hopei, mainly against the strategically important railways stretching from Peiping to Hankow in the southwest and to Kweisui (now the capital of the Mongol autonomous state, in the northwest.

The war in Shansi is not finished. It has merely entered a new stage.

Choral Program Set for Monday

The opening event of Christmas Week in Washington will be the National Choral Union's performance of the musical pageant, "Bethlehem," at the National Theater Monday. Hugh Ross, conductor of New York's famous Schola Cantorum, arrived in Washington yesterday to supervise the final rehearsals with the 150 singers and instrumentalists.

The National Symphony Orchestra is lending 25 players for the pageant, which was composed by Rutland Boughton. Among the professional singers who will take leading roles are Dorothy Seegar as Mary and Edward Steffe as Joseph. Lita Graham, of New York, will supervise costumes and lighting. Walter Nash, well-known local organist and composer, is in general charge.

80 Pupils Given Tuberculosis Tests

Eighty students of Eastern, McKinley and Anacostia high schools and St. Cecilia's Academy had X-ray pictures of their chests made yesterday in connection with the anti-tuberculosis program of the District Health Department and the Tuberculosis Association.

The tests, conducted at Eastern, were upon students who previously had shown positive reactions to tuberculin tests. They were financed by the sale of Christmas seals.

Forty-two of yesterday's subjects were from Eastern high, 25 from McKinley, 10 from Anacostia and three from St. Cecilia's Academy.

The Army Rules

By Barnet Nover.

Emperor Hirohito's Role.

NO PRESENT-DAY ruler occupies a more aloof and exalted position than does Emperor Hirohito of Japan. None is so surrounded by an impenetrable veil of mystery. And none wields, in theory at least, such absolute power as the descendant of the Sun Goddess.

When, therefore, President Roosevelt indirectly but pointedly addressed himself to Hirohito in the matter of the Panay incident he was going straight to headquarters. He was ignoring the more or less impotent bureaucrats of the Japanese Foreign Office for the No. 1 man in the Japanese scheme of things, the fountainhead of all power and action in the island empire.

But in doing that the President was wittingly or unwittingly calling attention to the two central myths around which Japanese national life revolves.

THE FIRST of these myths is the autocratic power of the Emperor. The second, a product of the first, is that the Japanese government governs.

Mr. Stimson, when Secretary of State, discovered how lacking in reality was the latter. He discovered that, with the best will in the world, the statesmen nominally directing the affairs of Japan could not bind that nation to a course of action satisfactory to the rest of the world and in line with Japan's own treaty obligations. Now President Roosevelt may expose to the world's view the myth that is the Japanese Emperor.

There is, of course, such a person as Hirohito. He is said to be an earnest individual with a bent for science and an awareness of the world about him. But the sentient being is almost completely lost in the symbol.

This is not a new fact in Japanese history. According to patriotic Japanese writers, the imperial line in Japan dates back to 660 B. C. when Jimmu Tenno, descendant of the Sun Goddess, came on the throne. There is no proof whatever of the validity of this contention. The earliest Japanese records date from around 1,000 years later. But in any case Japanese emperors can lay claim to an ancient lineage.

Well, during most of the time of which we have any authentic records, the real power was rarely in the hands of the Emperor, but usually in the hands of others who governed in his name.

The Emperor, however supreme and inviolable in theory, was in practice dependent upon the support of one or other of the great families. The removal, even the murder, of an Emperor or an heir to the throne is a common incident, and it is just to say that the continuance of the imperial house depended not upon its own strength but upon the fact that no single one of the rival factions could be suffered by the remainder to usurp imperial functions. When in course of time one great clan did in fact achieve a paramount position, it was expedient for them to control rather than to overthrow the reigning family . . . This, indeed, is a characteristic phenomenon in Japanese history until recent times—the persistence of a de jure sovereignty long after all but its external forms have been taken over by a de facto government.

The last of these great families to rule Japan in fact while a succession of emperors ruled the land in name, was the Tokugawas who as shoguns exercised kingly rights at Tokyo while nominally subordinate to the descendant of the Sun Goddess at Kyoto.

IN 1887 came the so-called Restoration. The Shogun was overthrown; the Emperor came into his own But while this development was to have revolutionary consequences since it made possible the modernization of Japan, it involved, in essence, a transfer of power not from the Shogun to the Emperor but from the Shogun to the military clans of the west who had brought about the restoration.

It is to these clans that the Emperor looked for "advice." It is they who dominated the army and the navy. It was they who ruled the roost in the name of the sacred person.

Not surprisingly they saw to it that the person of the Emperor was exalted. For behind the screen of the imperial myth they could operate with impunity. And while, from time to time, they found it necessary to make concessions to the great commercial and industrial families who arose in the nineteenth century, they never wholly abdicated their power.

OUTWARDLY, therefore, Japan's government was and is like the governments of the west. After 1889 Japan had a constitution, a parliament, a cabinet. But this structure rested on feudal foundations sometimes challenged but never destroyed. The last attempt to modernize the government of Japan occurred in that brief period between 1929 and 1932 and collapsed with the Manchurian adventure. This year saw another feeble flurry of liberal sentiment. That was followed by the latest incursion into China by the militarists.

Thus Japan has for most of its history lived under a dual government. Once the duality was that of Emperor-Shogun. In modern times it has been that of a facade of civilian administration and the reality of military power. Above both is and has been the Emperor, the source of all power. But as the incarnation of Japan he could obviously not take sides. As Prince Ito declared in his commentaries on the Japanese constitution:

The Sacred Throne was established at the time when the heavens and the earth became separated. The Emperor is heaven-descended, divine and sacred. He must be reverenced, and is inviolable. Not only shall there be no irreverence for the Emperor's person, but also he shall not be made a topic of derogatory comment nor one of discussion.

It may be that the duality of power in Japan is now nearing its end. But this does not mean that the civil government is likely to triumph over the militarists. The contrary is more likely. The hitherto frustrated demand for the transformation of Japan into a totalitarian state in which the army and navy will rule de jure as well as de facto is now rapidly being transformed into a reality.

In that development the nominally all-powerful Emperor will remain nominally all-powerful, now as before—above the turmoil of politics—a god whose authority is exercised for him.

Bible's Story

By William Lyon Phelps

Bates' New Book.

"BIOGRAPHY OF THE BIBLE" is the alluring title of a brief new book by Prof. Ernest Sutherland Bates, the able editor and preparer of "The Bible Designed to Be Read as Living Literature," which is having so great and well-deserved success in both America and Great Britain.

This biography of the Bible (published by Simon & Schuster, New York) is a slender volume of 183 pages, printed in large type. It gives the historical facts about the Bible, concerning its "character, authorship, text, translation, and influence on the evolution of mankind."

• • • •

THE SEPARATE CHAPTERS are called The Authors, Conflict Over Creed and Canon, The Bible Under Medievalism, The Great Translations, The Higher Criticism, The Bible and the Stream of Life, and there are a number of illustrations.

It is often said that young people today do not know the Bible; many of them certainly do not; but how many of those who are ignorant of the Bible could pass a satisfactory examination on (in translations, of course) Homer, Dante, Goethe, and other immortal writers?

had just been read in full, allowing hungry members to dash out for lunch, new objections to dispensing with re-reading forced the clerk to read it again.

Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell New York, made a point of order that the Norton substitute bill was not germane to the Senate bill before the House. He emphasized that the former provides for a single administrator under the Department of Labor, heading wages-hours committees of employers, employes and consumers for each industry, whereas the Senate bill provides for a labor standards board of five men. His point was that, although the purpose of each bill was the same, the methods were entirely different.

McCormack, anticipating this point, had prepared a seven-page typewritten ruling, citing numerous precedents, in which he finally ruled the Norton bill germane since it has the same fundamental purpose, although he said he recognized "the twilight zone" in the House rules, where "a narrow interpretation might interfere with the conduct of the House."

Only Fist Fight Lacking

Later he overruled another attack on the bill's germaneness by Representative John Martin (Democrat), Colorado, against the bill's child labor provision, and still later overruled Representative Robert L. Ramspeck, (Democrat), Georgia, when Ramspeck declared the Federation of Labor bill was not germane as a substitute to the Norton bill.

Nearly everything happened on the House floor that can happen, except perhaps a fist fight. Once 19 members were on their feet at once shouting, arguing and begging recognition. The confusion was terrific throughout. Only two unanimous requests during the entire day ran the gamut of objectors. Both were made by Rayburn at the same time, when, after a score of objections had cut two minutes from the five minutes allotted to Representative Lambertson (Republican), Kansas, with Lambertson still not having a chance to speak, Rayburn said:

"I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kansas be given five minutes' time, and also that to assist orderly procedure we consider amendments at this time only to the Griswold bill." Previously both the Griswold bill and the Norton bill had been open to amendments, with the confused members amending both bills at the same time.

Recognition Is Denied.

Representative John F. Dockweiler (Democrat), of California, had fought vainly throughout the early hours for recognition in order to substitute the federation bill, which he sponsored, for the Norton bill.

Despairing, at last, he sought and received aid of Representative Glenn Griswold (Democrat), of Indiana, who, as a labor committee member, could obtain prior recognition, and Griswold introduced the bill. Dockweiler had charged "a general conspiracy to keep me silent," but was shouted down by cries of "regular order."

In the House lobby Dockweiler exhibited a letter to himself, dated Wednesday, December 15, from William C. Hushing, legislative representative of the A. F. of L., urging all members of Congress, "in the event of failure of the Dockweiler bill, to vote for recommittal of the matter for further reconsideration by the committee," and declaring that "we (the federation) would be imbeciles, in consideration of our experience with the National Relations Board, and in view of the recent economic situation, to maintain now the same stand as when Congress adjourned last summer."

Federation's Power Felt.

Dockweiler's group of federation supporters thus may hold the balance of power today (or tomorrow), when the motion to recommit is made, at the conclusion of amendments and further substitutes to the Norton bill.

Many members, particularly a large bloc of Southern Democrats and some Republicans, who voted to kill the federation bill yesterday will fight the Norton substitute to the last line.

After lengthy wrestling over points of order had concluded, members who had been perfecting amendments, chiefly in the form of exemptions for certain industries in their own States, and who thought that the federation bill might possibly pass, rushed to get their amendments into the Griswold substitute.

Representative Lex Green (Democrat), Florida, picturesque in a blue shirt with huge flowing black windsor tie, pleaded twice for exemption of the "turpentine farmers of the South" from the wage-hour provisions. Twice he was voted down, although he ran up and down the aisles pleading with members to vote for his amendment.

Speaks for Oil Industry.

The first test of recommittal sentiment care on a motion from young Representative Lyle H. Boren (Democrat), Oklahoma, who said "I speak for the oil industry, which is not represented in this House," but the vote, 147 to 73, against reporting the bill back to the whole House with the enacting clause stricken was regarded as inconclusive.

During the violent session, Representative Alfred N. Phillips, jr. (Democrat), Connecticut, tried to amend the federation bill to provide for minimum wages of 53.5 cents an hour and a maximum 30-hour work week, as against the flexible maximums in the Norton bill of 40 cents an hour and a 40-hour work week, and against the Federation's flat 40-40 statutory law. He was defeated, as members laughed at his prediction that they would "one day see a three-hour working day in this country."

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), California, tried to amend the child section to allow theatrical children, "such as Shirley Temple," to be exempted from its provisions, but this, too, met defeat.

Senate Carries Crop Battle to Night Session

Leader Barkley. It would limit Washington administrative costs to 1 per cent of total program expenses, restrict State expenditures to 2 per cent, and require full publicity of county committee outlays.

On motion of Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, the Senate struck from the bill amendments designed to base cotton acreage allotments on a State-wide rather than the present county basis, and on the number of families actually engaged in growing cotton on a farm.

Wallace called allotment plans "price-fixing" programs that might "involve licensing of all businessmen who purchase farm products, and licensing of all farmers."

"If the situation were utterly desperate it might be all right to do that," said Wallace, "but if the situation gets that desperate then you are in the gravest danger of having to take a step toward that which they abroad call fascism, autocracy, and so forth."

Sees Fascist Trend.

Senator Lee has a domestic allotment substitute for the farm bill awaiting a Senate test, but Wallace declared he was not commenting on "any specific bill."

Wallace said it is "unusual that some people who profess the utmost horror toward fascism aren't joining us to solve the problem in a responsible way," but are "making it possible for some people who take an extreme view to launch us on something which is quite out of step with the genius of our institutions."

The Secretary declared this "business of licensing everybody and setting up differentials for grades in every market, and supervising every business transaction is likely to kick back." He said "the important thing is to handle the situation so it won't reach this pass."

Fears Downward Spiral.

The Secretary said "there is a feeling that other groups use the Government's power to impose a type of scarcity for their own profit and farmers don't see any reason why I should frown on farmers using the Government power to the same end.

"Just because other elements do, I don't see why farmers should," Wallace added. "If we begin a program like that we would have a downward spiral of scarcity. I don't see why the Government should stand for that kind of thing.

"It is perfectly natural that the farmers should want to do the same thing, but as Secretary of Agriculture my obligation is to see if something can't be worked out for farmers to co-operate in bringing about an ascending spiral of abundance instead of a descending spiral of scarcity."

Recently in a letter to Senators, the Secretary voiced his fears that the point at which the Senate bill invoked marketing quotas would entail too frequent use of them and might force farm prices way out of line with world levels, damaging our foreign markets.

Amendment Approved.

Yesterday's attempt to curtail appropriation features of the Senate bill now limited only by funds made available to make parity price payments to farmers, ended in approval of the amendment to appropriate "such sums as are necessary." The day before the Senate had rejected an amendment by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, limiting the appropriation to $500,000,000.

In vain, Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, argued yesterday that the original committee bill proposed only $400,000,000 for the new program, and asked that this provision be restored.

"Is it wise," asked Tydings, "for Congress to have no regard for the psychological effect of passing bills without monetary limitations. If it went on, inevitably it would mean new taxes and would hurt the farmers."

Following protests by Senator Borah, (Republican), of Idaho, the Senate struck from the bill, by a voice vote, a prohibition on benefit payments to farmers who fail to raise sufficient food and feed crops "to meet home consumption requirements."

It also eliminated, on motion of Senator Byrd, (Democrat), of Virgina, provisions exempting all benefit payments from control by the General Accounting office before they were paid.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—The American Farm Bureau Federation convention, over the objection of New York State delegates, adopted today a resolution indorsing provisions of the agricultural adjustment act of 1937, as presented by the federation to the House and Senate agricultural committees, and now pending in Congress.

The resolution set forth that provisions of the act offer the Nation assurance of ample supplies of farm products, afford farmers opportunity to control effectively surplus reserve supplies and assure farmers their fair share of the market at reasonable prices.

The New York delegation voiced strong opposition to crop control. C. C. Dumond, Ulster, N. Y., declared that New York farmers were almost 100 per cent against compulsory crop control, and added "we feel the American Farm Bureau Federatoin is becoming too involved in politics. Some day the pendulum is going to swing the other way and we will find ourselves too closely allied with one party."

In urging that the section of the resolution dealing with crop control not be adopted, Dumond said the same purpose would be served in a previously adopted resolution urging Congress to establish and maintain a managed currency on an index of basic commodities through a monetary authority which would have power to regulate the gold content of the dollar.

Earl C. Smith, chairman of the resolutions committee, said the section represented the wishes of a majority of farmers.

G. O. P. to Hold Policy Framers' Ranks to 150

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 15.—Republican Chairman John Hamilton asserted tonight seriousness and difficulty of the task, rather than factional differences, slowed naming of a committee to draft a new declaration of party principles.

Twenty-one of the 23 members of the G. O. P.'s executive committee have been in session here since Monday afternoon on the tedious job of choosing between more than 1,000 nominees.

"No name has been considered, passed or rejected," Hamilton declared, "because of that person's known friendliness or unfriendliness to any individual or group within the party.

"The committee realizes the seriousness of its task, and there is no discord. I have never known a more harmonious meeting of this committee."

Hamilton said the steering committee would be composed of approximately 150 men and women. Originally it was to have been a "committee of 100," and last night there were reports it would be enlarged to 200.

The list of members will not be made public till tomorrow, Chairman Hamilton said, the United Press said. It added that a final list of 12 proposed for the chairmanship included several from outside regular Republican ranks.—Editor's note.]

The conferees were divided into sub-committees tonight for final consideration of the policy group's personnel. Their task was to pare 25 per cent of a list of nominees still before them.

Although there has been no open manifestation of differences so far, outside observers expected a division between the friends of Herbert Hoover and Alf M. Landon over the choice of a chairman. It was understood 12 men still were being considered out of an original group of 35.

"I think there should be a woman vice chairman," Hamilton commented.

Wide Representation Urged.

Montpelier, Vt., Dec. 15 (AP).—Gov. George D. Aiken (Republican), today expressed the hope that representatives of agriculture, industrial workers and small businessmen—"the backbone of the Nation"—would predominate on any committee named to draft new declarations of party principles.

Two Answering 'Bluebeard' Ad Feared Victims

Paris, Dec. 15 (AP).—Two women, who answered help wanted advertisements inserted by Eugene Weidmann, killer of six persons for a murder-robbery gang, were reported missing today.

Police feared they met the same fate as Jean de Koven, Brooklyn dancer, and Mme. Janine Keller, sixth of Weidmann's victims, whose bodies have been found.

Hazen Includes Horse Show in Birthday Plans

Athletic Events Added to Roosevelt Dances for Paralysis Fight.

A horse show at Fort Myer and other sports events have been included on the President's birthday celebration program for the District, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Washington committee, announced yesterday.

The horse show, January 25 and 26, will be open to both military and private entries, Hazen said.

"We haven't quite decided what other sports events to sponsor," Hazen said, "but with dances at the hotels and the horse show we should exceed last year's $40,000 proceeds."

Col. J. M. Wainwright, commandant of Fort Myer; Maj. Gen. L. B. Kromer, chief of Calvary, and Maj. Harry Leonard, United States Marine Corps, retired, are assisting Commissioner Hazen in planning the show.

Hazen announced that balls will be held at the Willard, Raleigh, Washington, Wardman Park, Shoreham, Mayflower and Hamilton hotels January 29; and that one $2.50 admission ticket will be honored at all of them.

Plans also have been completed for a $25 gold plate breakfast at the Carlton Hotel following the dances.

Tickets for dances will be placed on sale at the hotels and automobile clubs. Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel, is chairman of the ticket committee.

Where'll Wally Sit? Heralds All Agog

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 15.—The heraldic College of Arms was disclosed today to have refused to record any precedence for the Duchess of Windsor, American-born wife of the former British monarch.

By declining to grant her the same precedence as her husband, the college broke one of the oldest customs in the history of British nobility.

Authorities on heraldry said a wife took the same rank as her husband when his was higher than hers, in all previous cases, but for minor exceptions.

The 14 members of the college, arbiter of British titles since its founding by Edward IV in 1464, ruled that the Duke of Windsor took precedence as the third royal duke.

The former Wallis Warfield became the Duchess of Windsor on her marriage to the duke but was given no further title. She is referred to only as "Her Grace" or "Your Grace."

It's quite an honor, of course, for a Senator to be chosen by the Vice President to preside over the Senate while Mr. Garner relaxes in hi. office . . . Constituents from the o' home State are vastly impressed, and rightly so.

• • • •

Here's now it's done, occasionally:

Mr. Garner: 'You're presiding this afternoon, Minton . . . You'll do less damage sitting in that chair than you will running around the chamber whispering to the other Senators."

Couldn't he put McNary, Vandenberg or Borah in the chair and keep them out of mischief too?

Since the Jap crisis began President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have guarded their utterances on the subject with consummate care . . . Mr. Hull cut off some of his sentences in the middle and the President didn't even risk a wisecrack when newsmen reiterated questions he had declined to answer . . . .

Finally someone asked a question about the appointment of a Third Assistant Postmaster General and everyone relaxed.

Probably it's foreign agitators who are spreading the rumor that the buck the Vice President shot in Pennsylvania last week was tied to a post in front of the porch where Mr. Garner was sitting.

Another swears the venison tasted like veal.

Of course, if the Vice President and his deadshot hunting companions from the Senate had been on the Panay, some of the attacking planes wold have been shot down out of control.

A member of Congress who knows ten times as much about women as I do tells me that, in his opinion, personal magnetism, or what is more vulgarly known as sex appeal, must have played quite a part in the election of the five feminine members of the House.

• • • •

He doesn't think a woman without sex appeal could get enough of the male vote to be elected.

But then, he adds, all women have some sex appeal.

Citizens Seek Bus Increase In Chevy Chase

Present Facilities Called 'Unhealthy and Unsafe' Due to Crowding.

The Chevy Chase Citizens Association, in session last night at the E. V. Brown School, voted to make an appeal to the Public Utilities Commission for more buses on the Chevy Chase line. Crowding of buses was called "unhealthy and unsafe" by the group.

The nominating committee submitted a slate of officers, to be voted upon next month. It included Lewis Radcliffe, president; John R. Manning, first vice president; George E. Fraser and Edwin S. Hege, second vice president, and George Dieffenbach, treasurer.

Nominations for the posts of delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations included Hege and Arthur Adelman.

"The plan," said he, "represents a very forward step in meeting wishes long held by local residents."

He added that "numerous gaps must be filled in translating the skeleton into legislative proposal."

At meetings Tuesday night the North Randle Citizens Association condemned the police and fire equipment in Southeast Washington as obsolete and almost useless, while praising the personnel. The association also voted to urge rezoning of several lots on Minnesota avenue to permit the erection of a store to take the place of one condemned at Fort Dupont Park. A resolution requesting installation of sewers on M street Southeast was adopted.

The Burleith Citizens Association voted for a referendum of property owners adjacent to the proposed Whitehaven Playground to determine if a playground is wanted in this location.

The Summit Park Association voted to continue its fight for the paving of Suitland road, between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-eighth streets Northeast, despite the statement by District officials that funds are not available.

The Randle Highlands Association voted to support the Hillcrest Association in its efforts to prevent granting of a liquor license in the 3300 block of Pennsylcania avenue southeast, and to the North Randle group in its effort to have sewer mains extended from Massachusetts avenue east of Anacostia road to O street southeast.

Board Plans Expansion of Trade Classes

Tribute Paid Educator on School Staff 50 Years.

Employment of approximately a score of teachers to expand the vocational educational activities in Washington schools seemed certain yesterday as the Board of Education prepared to use $23,500 of Federal money made available in the George Deen Act of 1936.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent in charge of vocational schools, and Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools in the divisions for colored pupils, reported to the board that all preliminary steps had been taken. The proposed plans were expected to be approved by Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

The $23,500, Dr. Holmes said, would be allotted for use between the present time and June 30, 1938. It will be used entirely for teachers' salaries. Teachers so employed must teach courses prescribed by conditions of the Federal Act.

These courses, according to Dr. Wilkinson, are to be of the apprenticeship type, of trades and mechanical and home economics courses.

The plans must come before the Board of Education for final approval, after they have been acted on favorably by Dr. Studebaker and local administrative officers.

Special examinations by which 16 former school teachers who resigned involuntarily because of the now-repealed "marriage" clause of the economy act, may be placed on the eligible lists for teaching positions were ordered yesterday by the board.

Robert A. Maurer, chairman of the personnel committee, reported that nine of the 34 teachers who originally resigned to save their husbands' jobs in the Government, already had been returned to the system. Maurer's committee recommended that only those teachers who had achieved high efficiency ratings during their employment be admitted to the examinations.

Experimental safety education classes conducted during the last year at Roosevelt and Dunbar High schools proved successful. Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, reported. He announced that school officers are now preparing a course of instruction on safety education for use in all local high schools.

Acting to prevent future losses of military equipment used by high school cadets, the board adopted regulations making school principals responsible for all equipment in their buildings. Recently rifles and other articles of equipment were reported missing from schools attended by colored pupils. The board ruled that hereafter all equipment will be issued by the military property custodian directly to the principals.

New School Named For Calvin Coolidge

Washington's new high school, construction of which will begin next year at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest, will be named for Calvin Coolidge.

Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, chairman of the buildings committee, recommended the school be named Coolidge.

The board also decided to name the new junior high school for colored children, to be erected at Eighth and Euclid streets for Benjamin Banneker. The elementary school that now bears the name of Banneker will be called Alfred Jones, in memory of a former supervising principal in Divisions X to XIII.

Admiral Nicholson Celebrates 85th Birthday

Army Control Of Conduit Rd. Plots to Cease

Park, Planning Commission to Take Over Upkeep of Grass.

One of the District's oddest oddities, mainenance of the center parking plots along Conduit road by the United States Army, is about to disappear.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, opening a two-day meeting this morning, will consider a plan drafted by the Army Engineers' Office for surrendering the responsibility to the office of National Capital Parks.

Ever since they were built the center parkings have been in the Army's custody because the Capital's water supply runs underneath them. Improper surface treatment would jeopardize the system, which is controlled jointly by Army engineers and the District Water Department.

The only condition to the jurisdictional transfer is that only grass shall continue to be planted in the center strips. Trees, shrubbery or anything with long roots would endanger construction below, Army officials assert.

Park and planning authorities are expected to approve the transfer, which will give the parks office, an Interior Department unit, responsibility for cutting the grass and policing the long stretch of parkings, which extend from Reservoir Road to the Dalecarlia Peservoir.

Other matters coming up for discussion include proposed improvements to Banneker, Takoma and Randall recreation centers, land purchases and cooperation with Virginia and Maryland planners in flood control, zoning and extension of parks.

At a joint session this afternoon with the Fine Arts Commission the questions of a vehicular underpass at Dupont Circle, a permanent flood levee in West Potomac Park and the proposed great plaza development on Fourteenth street opposite the Commerce building will be taken up.

Chairman Frederic A. Delano will preside over the two-day conference.

Adm. R. F. Nicholson Honored At 85th Anniversary Dinner

Among congratulatory messages was a cablegram sent from Shanghai by Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander in chief of the Asiatic Squadron, a post held by Admiral Nicholson in 1914.

In his distinguished career in the Navy, which began when he was 12 years old, Admiral Nicholson administered many eminently important offices. His first acquaintance with the sea service was in 1864 when he served as captain's clerk aboard the U. S. S. State of Georgia. He entered the Naval Academy four years later and was graduated in 1873.

After reaching the rank of lieutenant commander he was on duty in the battleship Oregon when she raced around Cape Horn in the Spanish-American War to join the Atlantic Fleet in annihilating the Spanish squadron commanded by Admiral Pascual Cervera at the Battle of Santiago.

He next commanded the U. S. S. Tacoma and then was attached again to the Bureau of Navigation.

In 1907 Admiral Nicholson assumed command of the battleship Nebraska, and two years later was ordered to duty with the board of inspection and survey.

He served as chief of the Bureau of Navigation from 1909 until 1912 and then commanded the Asiatic Fleet for two years.

After a brief tour of duty as a member of the general board of the Navy, Admiral Nicholson was retired from active service in 1914, but was recalled to active duty three years later to serve as American naval attache to Chile, Peru and Ecuador.

Pettengill Scores Fascist Thinking

The effort to discredit the Constitution as an outworn document is an echo of Mussolini's doctrine that "democracy is a rotten corpse," Representative Samuel B. Pettengill, Indiana, said last night before the District Society of Sons of the American Revolution at the Mayflower Hotel.

"To listen to these attacks one would think that the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were written by reactionaries and the Revolutionary War was won by Tories," he said.

Auto Fells Man As He Flees Police

John Kendrick, colored, 32 of the 1700 block of H street northwest, was struck and injured seriously by an automobile late last night as he ran from Precinct Detective G. L. Saunders, who was pursuing him to question him in connection with a larceny.

Police said Kendrick ran into the side of an automobile operated by Robert Schooler, 22, of the 600 block of Fourth street southwest. The accident occurred near Kendrick's home.

River-Harbor Body to Back D.C. Program

Backing of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress for the District's waterfront improvement program was assured yesterday as leaders of the congress met here to map an agenda for its convention next month.

A spokesman for the group, called together at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel by Representative William J. Driver, president of the congress, said the Washington project is on the list of those to be indorsed when the Congress meets.

Approval of the development calling for a yacht basin, new municipal wharf, harbor police and fire station, morgue and the widening of Water street has been indicated by Representative Ross Collins, chairman of the sub-committee on District appropriations of the House Appropriations Committee.

Cost of the project has been estimated at $380,000. Two items of $68,000 and $64,000, which would enable Army engineers to start work on the development next spring, are understood to have been approved by the Budget Bureau.

E. W. Sapp, vice chairman of the rivers and harbors committee of the Board of Trade, represented the District at the meeting.

A means of combating reduced appropriations for waterway and flood-control development foreshadowed in the Administration's economy moves, was the chief national interest of the meeting. Tentatively drafted was a legislative program aimed at increasing waterway funds, opposing transfer of operations from the Army Engineers and gaining approval for the Army's program for flood control on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

Among Those Present.

Dewey Is Quoted As Seeing Japan Attacking Manila

By the Associated Press.

John Barrett, former United States diplomat, said yesterday Admiral Dewey predicted in 1889 that within a half century Japan would conquer China, obtain possession of the Philippine Islands and dominate the Far East.

Barrett was a special diplomatic adviser to Dewey in the Philippines.

He said he had found notes of a conversation with Dewey in which the admiral said:

"I look forward some 40 or 50 years and foresee a Japanese naval squadron entering this harbor as I have just done and demanding surrender of Manila and the Philippines with the plan of making these islands part of a great Pacific Japanese Empire of the future.

50 Per Cent Raise In Shoe Duty Urged

By the Associated Press

Members of Congress, municipal officials and business men from New York and New England urged the Tariff Commission yesterday to grant a 50 per cent increase in duties on women's cemented shoes to protect American industry from "cheap labor" competition abroad.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, told the commission the group was merely asking "for a square deal" for American shoe manufacturers and workers, as seven House members also backed the plea.

Walsh was co-author of a Senate resolution directing the commission to investigate the difference in cost of manufacture of women's cemented shoes here and in Czechoslovakia. The hearing was called to obtain facts on costs of domestic production.

Pre-Christmas Theater Bills Offer Variety

Noted Pictures and Stars Announced for Capital Screens and Stages.

Paramount's new picturization of Rex Beach's thrilling story of "The Barrier" will be the principal screen attraction at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles in this exciting drama of the north country are played by Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker, James Ellison and Otto Kruger. A strong supporting company has been assembled for the numerous parts of secondary importance. Filmed against majestic natural settings, "The Barrier" is an outdoor spectacle of great beauty as well as a melodramatic romance of the first water. On the stage for the new week, the Earle will present in person Monte Blue, one of the foremost stars of the silent days of the cinema and a stage actor of note, and Mary Dees, the rising young film player who "doubled" for the late Jean Harlow in the later sequences of her last picture, "Saratoga," as coheadliners.

Leo Carrillo, Ian Hunter, Al Shean, ZaSu Pitts and Dorothy Peterson are the foremost members of the cast of "Fifty-Second Street" announced as major film offering for the week beginning Friday at Lowe's Capitol Theater. Others in the cast of this saga of New York's famous street of gay night spots include Pat Paterson, Ella Logan Sid Silvers, Marla Shelton and Kenny Baker. Specialties are introduced by Jack White, Rocco and Saulter, Georgie Tapps, dancer extraordinary; Cook and Brown, Jerry Colonna and Al Norman. Harold Young directed this Walter Wanger production for United Artists. The vaudeville bill for the new week will be headlined by Allen Cross and Henry Dunn, popular singers, and will offer Cliff Battles and Charlie Malone, of the Redskins, with Tony Wakeman, radio announcer, as a special added attraction.

Beginning tomorrow at RKO-Keith's Teater, the feature of the screen bill will be Republic's production of "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," a pretentious musical in which the foremost roles are portrayed by Leo Carrillo, Phil Regan, Ann Dvorak, Kay Thompson, Henry Armetta and Gene Autry, supported by a long cast of comedians, singers and dancers. Snappy musical numbers are promised in abundance and Phil Regan's voice, if no other, is worth hearing. The program will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News.

How a big city was cleared of its racketeers by honest investigators and honest prosecutors forms the theme of "Missing Witnesses," the Warner Brothers screen melodrama opening tomorrow for a week's engagement at the Metropolitan Theater. John Litel, Dick Purcell and Jean Dale appear in the leading roles, supported by William Haade, Raymond Hatton, Ben Welden, Harland Tucker and Sheila Bromley. The picture was directed by William Clemens and is said to present an hour or two of tense and thrilling entertainment. The bill will not be completed by the customary short reel subjects and full newsreel.

Executed in natural color by the new, three-tone Technicolor process, and providing splendid roles for Carole Lombard, Fredric March and Walter Connolly "Nothing Sacred," Ben Hecht's humorous expose of the "newspaper game" will be held for a second week as chief screen attraction at Loew's Palace Theater. The supplementary offerings, including "The Man in the Barn," also will be continued.

"The Sights of Paris" is announced as one of the featured short-reel subjects to be seen on the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. This is an interesting and picturesque travel subject dealing with the beauties of one of the world's most famous cities. A new release in the "Popular Science" series also will be included in the bill, which will be rounded out by added short features, cartoon comedies and complete newsreel coverage of the world.

William Powell and Myrna Loy, supported by Edgar Kennedy, John Beal, Florence Rice, Jessie Ralph and a host of lesser lights, will return to F street today in "Double Wedding," which renews its downtown run as chief feature of the new week's bill at the Columbia Theater. This crazy comedy is one of the laughing hits of the season. It will be surrounded on the program by short subjects of varied interest and a new release of "Events of the Day".

Rutland Boughton's choral drama, "Bethlehem," will be presented by the National Choral Union for the first time in Washington in the National Theater next Monday night, December 20, under the direction of Hugh Ross. More than 150 local singers will support a cast of principals that includes Dorothy Seegar, Elizabeth Lovejoy, Vera Neely Ross, Edwin C. Steffe, Harlan Randall, Edgar Kidwell, George Myers and George Anderson. The orchestral score will be played by 25 members of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Next Sunday, at the Little Theater, will mark the opening of a week's revival engagement of Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The Crusades" and the continuance through a second week of Pare Lorentz' documentary film of "The River," as an added attraction. The principal roles in "The Crusades" are played by Henry Wilcoxon, Loretta Young, Ian Keith, C. Aubrey Smith and C. Henry Gordon, with thousands in support. "The River" deals with the benefits and ravages of the Mississippi.

The new burlesque attraction opening at the Gayety Theater on Sunday for a week's engagement beginning with the usual Sabbath matinee, will present Evelyn Myers and Dolores Dawn as its featured feminine stars. The comedy department will be headed by "Reds" Marshall and Murray Leonard, two of the most capable funmakers devoting their talents to this form of light musical extravaganza. A beauty chorus will support the principals.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Frank Capra, President, Requests Letters Be Mailed to Academy at Hollywood; January 10 Is Deadline; "Show Girls" Wanted; Xmas Cards Begin to Arrive; Loew's Plan Party; J. C. C. Preview; Notes.

SINCE misery loves company, and the drama desks of the country are currently in the throes of picking the "ten best pictures of the year" —some of us have been in the throes until we practically have developed bad cases of the heaves—it is comforting to pass along the information that the general public is about to be let in on this shaky business of putting the finger on the cinema's superlatives.

This mass participation in the motion picture industry's annual guessing games will not be limited to any "ten best" of anything in particular, but will embrace all of the aspects of production with which the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences concerns itself in determining the awards of its golden "Oscars"—the gilded statuettes that symbolize extraordinary achievement in all branches of picture-making.

BELL.

For the first time, screen enthusiasts will have a voice in the academy's yearly awards, according to Frank Capra, famous director and incumbent president of the academy.

Mr. Capra has made it known that the public will be invited—it may be construed that it hereby is, as a matter of fact—to send letters to the academy in Hollywood selecting best pictures and performances in all fields from cartoon comedies to the multiple-reel, supercolossal, hyper-terrific spectacular feature releases.

This should be a field day for the omniscient lay observers who attend the moom pitchers in the firm conviction that all of us professional tyros lead the pack as likeliest candidates for those overstuffed cells in the better corrective institutions dedicated to the treatment of mental ailments.

There are only 518 feature productions, let alone the short subjects and all the stars, directors, authors, technicians, cameramen, art designers, costumers and water boys, to play around with this year, which, obviously, is a pretty skimpy field from which to select the "best."

I'll be waiting for you in my straightjacket when the padded wagon backs up to your door.

Actuated by a spirit of co-operation with the many civic groups and theatrical interests that are holding pre-Christmas "toy matinees" to provide Yuletide cheer for the Capital's underprivileged children, the Junior Cinema Guild, Miss Mathilda Young, director, announces that the guild's Saturday morning performances in the Rialto Theater will be deferred until after the holidays. There will be no guild programs on Saturday of this week, nor on Christmas Day or New Year's Day. The next bill under Cinema Guild auspices thus will be presented on Saturday morning, January 8, at 10:30 o'clock, when the Christ Child Society will be guests of honor.

Calling all "show girls."

A heavily lathered young outrider of the Loew organization pulls up his frothing bicycle to drop dispatches from headquarters to the enlivening effect that two or three of the Capital's handsomer young women are being offered an opportunity to strut their pulchritude, periphery, peachblow complexions and stuff in the special holiday stage bill to be presented at Loew's Capitol Theater the week beginning Friday, December 24, which is by way of being Christmas Eve.

Manager Kurtzman, of the Capitol, is in a practically perfect dither over the prospect of interviewing as many of the Capital's Venuses, Junos and Dianas as may aspire to take part in this parade of feminine sublimity. Applicants need possess no particular talent. It is not necessary to be an actress, singer or dancer—just sufficiently beautiful to knock a few eyes out of the heads of the cash customers, that's all.

Mr. Kurtzman, all aquiver, will be awaiting the Amazonian army at the Capitol on Sunday afternoon at 3, probably wearing a pair of smoked glasses.

The Three Graces selected will be engaged for a full week at a regular professional salary and will appear in a minature stage item that is expected to bring back memories of the late Flo Ziegfeld in his heyday.

Yerby Pannill, well known in the festival dramas offered during the past several years by the Washington Players, will appear for the second season in "The Other Wise Man," the famous drama legend by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, which will be presented for the thirteenth consecutive year at Luther Place Memorial Church, at 8:30 each evening from December 27 to 30, inclusive. Other local actresses who will appear in this Bess Davis Schreiner dramatization are Elinor T. Evans, formerly of the Washington Civic Theater, and Olga Dryden, of the National City Players. Denis E. Connell will play the title role.

Today at 1:30 p. m., in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, the Jewish Community Center, for the first time in Washington, is presenting a preview screening of a Jewish talking picture. The film is "Green Fields," featuring Maurice Schwartz and the Arteff Players. It is regretted that inability to be present will preclude a later discussion in this space of this interesting and novel event.

What with the avalanche of thoughtful Christmas greetings already beginning to arrive, that postman is ringing virtually all the time. The first to arrive was from that veteran showman, Sam Stratton, who has stepped into the breach in the Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey Circus personnel created by the recent passing of the fabled Dexter Fellows. The next bore the smiling likeness of Sophie Tucker. She's a circus, too, in a manner of speaking. With a basketful of others in between, the last to fall on the desk was from that stalwart champion of the living theater, Howard Herrick, one of the major blessings of the drayma desks. I'm getting mine out early again this year, too—along about midnight on Christmas Eve, just to keep my record unblemished.

• • • •

And speaking of Noel (as who this side of China isn't?) the loewcal Loew organization this year is making a day of its Christmas party on next Tuesday, December 21. For the first time under the divisional managership of Carter Barron, the festivities, always among the pleasantest of the season, will include all of the managers in his territory, in addition to the boys and girls of the local press.

The goings-on will be inaugurated Tuesday at 3, with a preview screening of "Rosalie," costarring Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell, and then will proceed to an hour of camaraderie, a banquet at Harry Somerville's refurbished Willard and an evening of high hilarity and goodfellowship. This always is one of the high spots of the Yule and I accept Mr. Barron's gracious invitation to be among those present with an alacrity that ought to make a monkey out of the speed laws.

What's-in-a-Name Note.

Civic Theater

The Washington Civic Theater's production of Andre Obey's "Noah," a play never before seen in the National Capital, presented for the first time in the Wardman Park Theater last night, revealed a fantastic comedy-drama of a fiber not sufficiently substantial to justify the effort that quite evidently had been bestowed upon its presentation.

In shaping his fanciful tale of Father Noah and the Deluge, the author has computed his dramatic values in simple equations of Noah's sublime faith, his wife's disturbing doubt and his children's frank distrust and open rebellion. To the animals in the Ark he has attributed an instinctive trust that is greater than their human companions', riding the uncharted turbulence of the tempestuous flood that is bearing them to the promised haven of an unknown Ararat. In an apparent attempt to clothe his unique treatment of the biblical narrative with a cloak of sophisticated comedy, he has interlarded otherwise imaginative dialogue with a constant flow of anachronistic modern speech that lends the text a peculiarly hybrid quality that creates neither realism nor conviction.

The character of Noah alone is free from this taint of counterfeit "smattness." Into this part Obey has written long soliloquies and a paternal solicitude that are frequently as emotionally moving as they are illuminating of the simple faith of the hero of a great and majestic adventure.

To this central role of the play Denis Connell brings a sympathetic and forceful reading, a variety of approach and a dramatic authority that make the three acts conspicuously and completely his. His performance towers above his associates' as the single professional touch in a production that is flagrantly amateurish in both character delineation and material investiture. The one exception to this blanket indictment, other than Mr. Connell, is Betty Rice, effectively cast as Mrs. Noah, a part to which she brings a fine equipment of intelligence and skillful limning of recurrent changes of mood.

It is in the costuming of the animal characters in the play that its greatest weakness is to be found. An illusory sort of symbolism upon which much of the pith of the three acts depends is lamentably vitiated by animal figures that are as grotesque as they are in many cases unrecognizable. A tailless elephant is one of the zoological novelties.

The ambition to regale Washington with plays it has not heretofore seen is a wholly laudable one, but it should be restricted to works with which a resident laboratory theater is able to cope with some reasonable chance of success. N. B. B.

Prominent on New Week's Bills

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Dec. 15.—Settin' Around (Metro-Goldwin-Mayer): In each of the major studios, one or two directors are known as "mortgage lifters." They are the master craftsmen whose productions, month in and month out, always make money, whose "discoveries" always develop into valuable stars. In other words, they are the financial and artistic backbone of the motion-picture industry. The ace director of this studio is W. S. "Woody" Van Dyke.

CLARK GABLE.

Starting with "White Shadows in the South Seas," he has directed smash hit after smash hit. "Trader Horn," "Eskimo," "Rose Marie," and at least a score of others, all of which coined money. Like most of Hollywood's great directors, he was trained in the hard school of "horse operas," grinding out fast action melodramas on skimpy budgets. Metro still cannot accustom itself to his speed. During the filming of "Rose Marie," the studio spent hundreds of dollars to send an army of newspaper writers to the Lake Tahoe location to watch the shooting of the great Indian sequence, which was scheduled to take eight days. The writers arrived too late—Van Dyke had shot the eight-day sequence in one day and one night.

• • • •

As a person, he is more colorful than most stars. Blunt-spoken and fearless, he calls a spade a spade—and star egos crash into bits under the lash of his tongue. On his set, he is undisputed boss—and yet, in all Hollywood, he is probably the best loved man. He has the common touch.

• • • •

Found the "Girl of the Golden West" troupe working in a set which represents a combination saloon and gambling hall. Standing near me, on the sidelines, was one of the studio's chief property men. "See that roulette table," he whispered, pointing to the most ornate item in the gambling layout. "There is a story in that piece of furniture. It used to be in the casino at Agua Caliente. When the Mexican government banned gambling there, the studio bought two for 'props.' A half a million would be a conservative estimate of the amount of dough that has passed over that table—and four-fifths of it came out of the pockets of Hollywool stars, producers and directors."

• • • •

After weeks of preparation and casting arguments, "Test Pilot" is at last in production. Today, in an airport near the studio, I watched the filming of air scenes. High overhead droned two planes —one containing Gable and a stunt pilot, the other carrying the camera crew. Directly over the field, the one plane began to stunt—loops, barrel-rolls and dives. Spencer Tracy, standing beside me, chuckled. "Imagine," he said. "Clark's one great ambition is to become a pilot. Twice he has started to take flying lessons—and twice the studio has ordered him to quit. And now the same studio that won't let him fly, orders him into a stunting plane for a movie scene. Any way you look at it, this is a screwy business."

• • • •

To everyone on the Metro lot, he is known as "The Little Moocher." For nearly three years, he has stood in front of the studio—a ragged, pathetic looking kid in his early teens—selling newspapers and magazines by dint of emotional appeals. "Please, mister, my mother's sick . . . " And every star on the lot has dug, and dug deep. Today, on the "Benefits Forgot" set, I found him acting before the cameras—down on the pay roll for $100 a week. "How come?" I asked Director Clarence Brown. "Well," said he, "a few weeks ago they let the kid peddle his papers on the lot. I saw him go up to Garbo, talk with her for a minute—and sell a 5-cent magazine for a $1 bill. And then and there I decided that such a talented actor ought to have his chance."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Dec. 15.

GEORGE M. COHAN is anxious for President Roosevelt to see "I'd Rather Be Right." Mrs. Roosevelt has promised that when the show comes to Washington she'll do her best to have the President attend . . . The show, however, is due for a long run here, and Cohan is impatient. When he saw Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Cohan therefore suggested that he'd be glad to come to the White House with some members of the cast and there perform as much of the show as is possible . . . "I've got even a better idea," the veteran star proposed. "Why can't we have a command performance?" . . . F. D., Jr., shook his head and replied: "Hell, no. We haven't reached that stage yet."

• • • •

THE MERCURY THEATER GROUP, now presenting "Julius Caesar" in modern dress, and Marc Blitzstein's "Cradle Will Rock"—the most important contributions to the American theater within the last five years —will invade the motion picture field next year. Arrangements are being made for the leasing of studios in the East . . . Life cameramen now are at Bellevue's mental ward photographing the inmates—and the latters' relatives are complaining . . . Here's why Emil Ludwig missed the boat last week: On Tuesday I reported that he was a heavy investor in the stock market. On Wednesday the Internal Revenue men descended upon him before his sailing, attached his accounts and grabbed his dough.

ROY ROBERTS is the young actor who was signed for the Ed Wynn show, "Hooray for What," was replaced by Jack Whiting and then returned to the job on opening night when Whiting became ill. Roberts discontinued his rehearsing for another show when he was called back to this musical and performed admirably. Whiting, however, now has rejoined the cast . . . In appreciation for his saving their show—a $150,000 production—the chorines yesterday gave Roberts a $200 cigarette case. Now Roy has a beautiful cigarette case—but no job.

DESPITE MAYOR HAGUE'S announcement that in Jersey City he is the law, and despite his frantic drive against labor unions, two firms in Hague's domain recognized the C. I. O. yesterday. The firms are the Standard Cap & Seal Co. and the Fargo Cap Corporation . . . The C. I. O. placed paid ads in all Jersey papers offering to purchase property on which they could hold their meetings . . . The March of Time will offer a 16 mm. version of its newsreel for home use . . . Alec Woollcott arrived in Chicago to see Sam Behrman's new Guild play and to determine whether or not he'll accept the role written for him.

GEORGE WHITE, who was about to sign with C. B. S. for his "Scandals of the Air," called the deal off when they insisted upon a repeat broadcast, without extra cost . . . Elliot Paul, author of "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," sailed for Europe last week for a five-day mystery trip there. His destination is Madrid . . . Harry Conn, for his "Earaches of 1938" program Sunday, allotted trick names to every member of his cast and asked Band Leader Mark Warnow to respond to the name "Mark Toscanini." Warnow refused, explaining that musicians revere the maestro too much to gag about him. After long urging a compromise was offered. "What'll you settle for?" Conn suggested . . . "I'll settle," Warnow agreed, "for Stokowski!"

DOROTHY PARKER and her husband, Alan Campbell, are so incensed at that Maryland Justice of the Peace who fined him $100 for speeding and $100 for refusing to take off his hat in the courtroom barber shop that Campbell will appeal to the higher courts of that State . . . The Nicholas Bros. will appear on Ben Bernie's new broadcasts for U. S. Rubber . . . The Eagle strikers now have two Santa Clauses picketing in Brooklyn.

• • • •

THE BLUE-BLOODED COLONY CLUB, now offering dance lessons to the daughters of its swanky members, includes among the routines taught "The Conversation Step, the Waltz and the Big Apple." . . . Phil Barry's new show will be entitled "Wild Harps Playing." . . . Current at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse is the movie "Life and Loves of Beethoven"—a French-produced picture about a Viennese. Next week will be shown "Loves of de Maupassant"—a Viennese-produced picture about a Frenchman.

She was taken to the wardrobe mistress, who conducted her to the door of the dressing room where the chorines don their costumes . . . MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man, 35, very much interested in people and children. In my manhood I have had to guard against falling in love, for I have—so I am told by a large number of girls—an extremely pleasing personality. Perhaps this is due to the fact that I can be as considerate and courteous to the hat check girl as to the girl whose good fortune it is to have been born to better circumstances. I have had to work hard for the fairly good position I hold today, and know all too well the value of a dollar.

• • • •

Now, to tell you something about two young ladies I am interested in. Alice is brilliant; a secretary who rides, swims, golfs, plays tennis, writes, directs plays, sings over the radio occasionally, dances beautifully and has great personality and charm. I met her in Chicago five years ago, dated her a few times before coming East, and have kept in constant touch with her since by letter. When I have been down and out, mentally or financially, her cheering letters bolstered my courage. Never once did I kiss her or think of doing so. I worship her father and mother, as they do me. I also like her brothers and sisters. I have not, of course, revealed to her that I think she would make an ideal wife, as shortly after I left Chicago she started going with another man whom I like very much.

• • • •

My next girl was a teacher—more beautiful and graceful than Alice but not so versatile. She was all that any man could expect in a wife. Once she steered me to a maternity hospital to look over the darling infants that I am so fond of (some day I hope to have several of my own). But after two years' courtship she very wisely married another chap whom she had known but a short time. She, her husband and I are the best of friends, and they both show an interest in my welfare, as I do in theirs. Truly I like them.

• • • •

Last winter another young lady entered my life. Jane loves people, is a physical education teacher and of course, goes in for every sport one can think of. In a physical way she stirs me as no other woman ever has, and we have exchanged numerous kisses in our short courtship of eight months. I met and knew her in Boston, and was transferred here several months ago. She wishes me to tell her that I love her, and as yet I have not committed myself, not even to calling her "darling," for God Almighty knows that I do not know what love is. When I would not reply to her question concerning my feelings, she stopped writing for a few weeks and wanted to call our friendship off.

• • • •

She is of Scandinavian birth and not quite as tactful as some of our American-bred girls, but speaks directly and truthfully from her heart. She is well liked by young people of both sexes. She is now going with another chap but thinks a great deal of me and I know would like to get married. But I find so much clean enjoyment in male friendships that I do not know what to do. Please advise what you think would be best for me and all concerned. And tell me—am I in love with either girl? Sincerely,

E. A. G.

Inhibitions at Work.

DEAR E. A. G.: If you are in love with anybody at the present writing, it is with yourself and yourself alone. You seem, for some elusive reason, to be currently inhibited from falling genuinely in love. Fear, a sense of social and financial insecurity, quaking doubts concerning your ability to shoulder adult responsibilities, may be the inhibiting factor. Very probably you dare not love a woman lest you be tempted to marry her, and in marrying her, find yourself eventually with a family to support. Your "clean enjoyment" of masculine friendships (which stands in the way of your knowing "what to do" about your feminine relationships) may mean that you have developed an emotional dependence upon your own sex for the simple reason that it is only when with men that you are not on guard against your feelings.

• • • •

Such a childish variation from the normal pattern of mature masculine emotional expression suggests a man in full flight from the responsibilities of matehood and fatherhood. Fear of romantic and tender intimacy of a self-revealing sort with the opposite sex might be another inhibiting factor. Perhaps your early environment and social training was not such as to put you at ease with women; perhaps you feel you do not know how to be a lover, and subconsciously have elected to keep your distance rather than reveal your ignorance. Naturally, with nothing whatever of a case history to go on, I cannot lay a finger on the core of the inner conflicts which gives rise to your outward indecisions. The most I can do is suggest what the trouble may be, and where found, and leave it to you to dig down into yourself for the painful yet healing truth.

• • • •

Your only hope of becoming a whole man, a decisive man, an emotionally dynamic man, capable of finding love and committing himself to a wholesomely expressive love life, is to arrive at an understanding of the inner conflicts, frustrations and inhibitions which make you the emotionally inadequate person you are today. Once understood by the conscious mind, they will heal themselves, with some rightly directed social conduct on your part. A first-class psychoanalyst would no doubt be your best ally in arriving at such understanding.

M. H.

NEW IDEAS FOR PARTY

Dance the Big Apple at Your Round-Up.

YOU'D LOVE to give a successful party? All you need is a jolly new idea—and here's one ready-made for you, a Wild West Round-up.

Invite your crowd to "rough it" in sports clothes and gay scarfs and put them in proper "Howdy, Stranger" mood with the cowboy hat ice-breaker.

On the bands of the hats—which of course are the inexpensive paper variety—write names of imaginary dude ranches. Use one name for two hats so that only one girl and one man will get a "Lazy B," and so on.

By the time each hat finds its twin everybody's acquainted and the matching hats happily dance at least one dance together, and maybe make a date to eat refreshments.

As for what to dance—what could suit you Wild Westerners better than the rip-snortin' Big Apple?

Turn on a lively fox-trot, join hands in a circle and pick your peppiest guest to call figures.

Turn as the caller directs, and keep truckin'. Easy and fun—to learn the Big Apple steps.

Now for a "tenderfoot" game—a "Guess Who" contest. Line up unfamiliar pictures of movie stars—those candid camera shots that make Taylor look like Beery are the most fun. Let the crowd guess who's who and give a prize to the best guesser.

For more sure-fire ideas turn to our 40-page booklet, "New Ideas for Party Fun." Stunts for special and holiday occasions, ice-breakers, novel dances, contest games, directions for the Big Apple. All inexpensive and fun.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "New Ideas for Party Fun," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Technicolor Makes Green New Favorite In Movie Dresses

The color green, long spurned by film and stage stars, now is having a great vogue in Technicolor films. Milo Anderson, designer for Warner Brothers, has declared green to be the most thrilling color on the Technicolor chart. It has the brightness of yellow nad the shadows of blue in its make-up and so reproduces especially well in color films.

While heretofore a green dress was supposed to doom a picture to failure and while actresses who came to the films from the stage were superstitious about wearing it, it has now become so important that Hollywood is flauntnig it in all sorts of new shades.

All the materials Olivia De Havilland wears in "Robin Hood" were dyed under the personal supervision of Anderson. Consequently he has produced some new colors, two of the luscious greens, which are destined for tremendous popularity. One is "Robin Hood green," similar to the old Lincoln green, but with more of a gray cast. Another is "Saracen head green," a very yellowish shade. "Maid Marian blue" is a soft shade of turquoise which Anderson declares the perfect tone for love scenes in the moonlight.

U. S. Librarian Opens Classes To Improve Posture of Clerks

By Genevieve Reynolds.

ONE DAY Miss Evelyn Adams, entertainment librarian of the Interior Department, sitting slouched at her desk woke up to the fact that she was developing wide hips and a bad posture. She took stock of herself and realized that sluggishness and other stultifying habits of the office worker—worst of all, a general apathy toward life were creeping up on her. She began to look around her and saw that a large number of other women at Government desks were yielding to the same weaknesses.

Being a former dancer, she decided to do something about the situation. She took the matter up with officials of the Interior Recreation Association and received permission to take whatever measures she could to combat hump shoulders and the "desk chair spread."

Determined to eradicate the teetering walk and general tenseness that usually characterize office workers, Miss Adams began placing posters in conspicuous places in the building. These placards bore arresting titles and pictures, such as: "Is This the Way You Walk?" "Do Your Clothes Fit Properly?" "Do You Know How to Sit?"

Eurythmics Class Formed.

Out of this desire to help other career women, grew her class in eurythmics, which meets at 4:30 p. m. each Monday and Wednesday in the gymnasium of the Interior Department.

Directing this class is a purely voluntary labor. Miss Adams receives no compensation for her services except the satisfaction of seeing taut, nervous girls become relaxed; stiff, over-earnest women workers gain in grace; overweight and underweight girls normalize their avoirdupois.

"Eurythmics," according to Miss Adams, is a "series of rhythmic exercises derived from the simplified dance forms that develop graceful movements through complete bodily control."

"These exercises, based on dance technique," she explained, "range from the Russian ballet to modern German, and are definitely designed to relieve the stiffness of women habitually confined to an office. Besides limbering up the body, a greater fluidity of movement is obtained which enables the participants to handle their hands and feet gracefully in action or repose."

Eighty Enrolled in Class.

While there are 80 members enrolled in the class, usually about 30 girls of the Interior Department assemble in the gymnasium. Sometimes as many as 50 report, and at other times there are as few as ten, for attendance is entirely voluntary. Some dress in bathing suits, some in slacks, some in shorts and others in work clothes. Here is how a typical session of the class is conducted: Standing in an upright position members of the class limber up their arms and shoulders by raising and lowering them in an upward movement, followed by a side circulatory movement.

Then come hand and chin exercises that banish fatigue pains from the back of the neck. Here is the procedure; hold the chin up and bend forward and backward, then from front to left. Then reverse procedure by bending to the right and back in four counts.

Attention is then given to the hips and stomach. Assuming an upright position, members of the class lift arms above the head and touch the floor with hands without bending the knees, repeating at least ten times and stretching backward as far as possible. They follow this by bending from the waist, first to the right and then to the left.

Tension Is Relieved.

Next comes the high kick that relieves tension in the thighs and legs. In unison the class kicks each foot rapidly as high as possible. This is repeated 50 times to rhythmic measures.

To relieve the stiffness of typist fingers the class follows this procedure: Sitting on the floor and holding the hands up with palms outstretched they bend each finger inward toward the middle of the palm and release the fingers by pulling up. Counting rhythmically they bend all fingers at the same time. This is followed by a foot exercise that strengthens the arches.

From this, the class goes into a simplified "hula hula" dance. The slow twitching of hips and the swaying of arms bring fluidity and rhythm as well as bodily coordination.

For balance and grace, the class practices the javelin and shield exercise and nauth movement. The javelin and shield step comes from the Greeks and the nauth movement is taken from some of the Oriental dances. From these exercises, Miss Adams expects to lead the class into more difficult forms of ballet dancing or top.

"My first aim," says Miss Adams, "is to get all parts of the body relaxed and rhythm conscious. This can be done only if the body is in perfect alignment—that is, with head balanced correctly.

"To illustrate what I mean," she continued, "I work with a paper skeleton that shows all the parts of the body correctly placed. I start with the head and spine.

"I especially stress the position of the spine for it controls good posture—which is the fundamental essential for good health and grace."

Instead of telling her pupils to place the weight of their bodies on the inner balls of the feet, Miss Adams insists that they distribute their weight evenly on each foot.

In attempting to take the stiffness out of the career woman, Miss Adams pays particular attention to each girl's individual physical and social needs.

Officially Miss Adams is recorder for the General Land Office of the Interior Department. But along with her voluntary direction of the eurythmics class she also has charge of a theater group that works with radio, public speaking, stage technique and stage production.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Heart Disease Treatment.

We called attention yesterday to a recent magazine article which reviewed the condition of heart disease in the United States. Whether this mortality can ever be improved is doubtful. At the present time the most that we can say about it is that it depends more upon individual initiative than anything else.

Most people with heart disease are walking around, and although they occasionally have to resort to bed rest for short periods, most of the time their condition can be well controlled by means of such medicines as digitalis, and by supervision of the routine of daily life.

The question of exercise always is a difficult one in heart disease, and is decided by the physician as an individual problem, so that hard and fast rules cannot be laid down. In valvular disease with good compensation, exercise is a useful method of treatment. The patient should be taught to watch and measure the dosage of exercises he uses very carefully. Even sitting in a chair is exercise as compared with lying flat, because a certain percentage of additional work is required of the heart in the upright position.

A man with high blood pressure, especially a high diastolic blood pressure, in the recumbent position is putting a heavy load on his heart and this cannot be greatly increased.

The most important guide to exercise is the functional response of the heart. This consists in the pulse rate before and after exercise, breathing, fatigue, discomfort or pain in the region of the heart. Sometimes under exercise irregularities of the heart will disappear and if this is the case, it is a good indication that more exercise can be tolerated. If exercise results in shortness of breath, this also must be analyzed. In fact, people who are unused to exercise may become very breathless, but this is not necessarily an indication that they should stop. The patient, however, who continues to be short of breath on exercise, and in whom this symptom does not improve, had better give it up.

Diet has little, if any, influence on heart disease, either as a causative factor or in treatment, although there is a large body of belief to the contrary. The diet of a heart patient need not be modified to any extent except sometimes simply to reduce the total amount of it.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 15.

ONE OF the most popular sports of the day is turning the alert and serious minds of college students loose on the great problems of the day, such as the proper batter for flapjacks. But now one of our schools — the Department of Commerce, Accounts and Finance — has allowed its hopeful young Morgans to tamper with something many millions of people consider sternal.

ALICE HUGHES.

In short, the school's newspaper asked the young ladies and gentlemen just what they thought of the Ten Commandments, as received by Moses in Holy Writ. And not a few budding bank tellers and secretaries thought the Mosaic law had serious faults, and made no bones about saying so.

Some 1,485 students were asked their valuable opinions on the Rules of Conduct from Sinai. The idea was to discover whether or not "these axioms of correct living are antiquated and conspicuously out of place" in the modern world.

Well, the very modern students were pretty hard on some of the rules, no less than 219 voting down the Seventh, while 201 said that the one about "not coveting thy neighbor's wife" has no place in modern society. The young financial geniuses seem to feel that it is now a case of every man and woman for himself, and N. Y. U. will duly sheepskin over 200 potential home-wreckers.

• • • •

But it was the first three, running through Keeping Holy the Sabbath Day, that were practically annihilated by the studes, no less than 291 condemning the santification of a day. The tiniest opposition appeared in the matter of honoring father and mother—no more than 12 revolutionaries voting that it made no difference. A strange, interesting and slightly terrifying poll, this, inasmuch as it indicates that in many quarters eternal verities are not eternal at all.

And if you want to see our Mayor, you can combine the call on Hizzoner LaGuardia with a visit to the Empire State Building. The mayor has moved to the twenty-second floor of Al Smith's Monument while his new quarters in our beautiful little city hall are getting all fixed up.

No Backward Step!

Jelleff's Will NOT Be Open Evenings!

Because we believe that there has been no great demand for it from our patrons.

Because we are not frightened at the small amount of business which outlying stores probably take from us by being open at night while we are closed.

Because of the extra strain it would put upon that part of our personnel not protected by the eight-hour law.

Because we believe we could not give our patrons proper service during the day if part of our experienced force were switched to night duty, as would be necessary.

We are glad, therefore, to be numbered among those forward-looking stores in our city which have refused to take this backward step.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Reducing Before 30 May Injure Health and Appearance.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE APPALLING thing about this reducing business is that so much of it is carried on by young women who should not be reducing. Up to the age of 30 your looks and health are much more likely to suffer from underweight than from avoirdupois. Those few extra pounds are a protection against disease, and there is nothing less attractive than illness.

It has been my experience, however, that the most recklessly determined reducers are to be found among these young women. That this experience is by no means unique is indicated by the action of the health department of the City of New York, which is campaigning to make young women appreciate the protection of a small surplus of weight against tuberculosis, the disease which is responsible for one-fourth of all the deaths of young women.

114 Pounds Too Little.

The occasion for this weight interest by Health Commissioner John L. Rice's department was an advertisement which read: "Wanted, young women between the ages of 20 and 25 years for models. Must be 5 feet 8 inches tall. Must weigh not over 114 pounds." The height of 5 feet 8 inches probably included high heels, but even so, the 114 pounds is far too little.

There is an even greater margin between the weight stipulated and the 138 or 141 pounds a girl of 5 feet 8 inches should normally weigh at that age. Only an unusually tall, slender girl with a very light frame could meet the requirements of health and the advertisement. Less than normal weight means an increased susceptibility to tuberculosis.

To quote from Dr. Charles F. Bolduan, director of the bureau of health education of the City of New York health department: "The chance of getting tuberculosis depends on two main factors—the entrance of the germ of tuberculosis into the lung, and the ability of the individual's body to handle the germ without serious consequences. To resist tuberculosis every effort should be made to build up the general health, which cannot be maintained on a starvation diet and which is not found with marked underweight.

Extra Weight for Youths.

"To be sure, we advocate slight underweight for the group over 40, but for children, and especially for young adults, it is far better that they be slightly overweight. A moderate degree of plumpness is some insurance against tuberculosis, and unless there is a great excess of weight young women should leave reduction treatments alone."

Proper rest is the factor most neglected in the health program of the young woman, Dr. Bolduan believes. It is easy to determine whether you are getting your share of rest and sleep. If someone has to wake you several times or you sleep through the alarm clock, you are getting too little rest.

Prevention of tuberculosis consists in building your health to its highest possible level through good habits of living. Get your rest, try to enjoy outdoor activity, and keep your weight slightly above normal, for health sets the fashion in weight.

Scores of D. C. Notables Attend Beethoven Concert

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

So far as Washington society was concerned, Christmas shopping went by the boards yesterday afternoon. With luncheons and teas all over town, there was scarcely a minute left for anything extra-curricular to the regular line of partying.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Yet scores of social notables did find time—and were more than glad they did—to forget the hustle and bustle about them long enough to slip away to the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge auditorium at the Library of Congress to hear a delightful all-Beethoven program given by Adolph Busch, famous Viennese violinist, and Rudolph Serkin, noted accompanist.

Proof that a large number of Washingtonians appreciate the rare privilege of hearing these masters of music is borne out by the fact that many celebrities stand in line for hours to get tickets. The demand is much larger than the auditorium's seating capacity.

Four sonatas were the order of the program yesterday afternoon, with the audience showing its appreciation by clapping almost five minutes at the close. As most music minded Washingtonians know, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, formerly of Boston, gave the Library of Congress her exquisite quintet of Stradivari stringed instruments on condidtion that they could be kept in use. Furthermore, she provided a fund for programs in which they would figure. Yesterday afternoon's entertainment, as well as others in this seasons' series, was the result.

Scores of Notables Present at Program

In any direction you looked there were scores of social notables—prominent men and women who were there, not simply to be seen in a brilliant audience, but because they love good music. Among those I glimpsed before the lights were dimmed for the first number were Mrs. Whittall herself, who must be more than proud of the programs for which she is responsible; Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of the Library of Congress, who has also been active in bringing them to pass, and Mrs. Frederick S. (Elizabeth Sprague) Coolidge.

Also there were Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who came with Mrs. Truxton Beale; Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller; Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister; Mrs. Carroll Glover, Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovak Minister, who arrived with Mme. Otakar Kabelac; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, whose own musicales will get under way this month, was there with Mme. Constantin Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister. Mrs. Stanley Reed came with Mme. van Kaathoven. Also present were Mme. Witwold Wancowicz, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy; Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, sitting next to Miss Willa Magee; Miss Angelicia Lloyd, Mrs. Edward Burling, Miss Josephine Patten, Miss Sally Holmes and Miss Alice Tukerman—to mention but a few.

Frau Dieckhoff Has Record 'at Home'

Many in the audience later went on to the tea given by the German Ambassador and Frau Dieckoff. Judging from the long line of automobiles pulling up in front of the mansion that was once the Hungarian Legation, this party proved to be one of the record "at homes" of the season.

The host and hostess received in the small drawing room to the left of the entrance. The hostess, simply but beautifully dressed, wore a trim black frock with a silver lame vest and girdle. A string of pearls and long earrings were finishing touches to the ensemble.

The hum and buzz of what seemed thousands of voices in the dining room turned out to be, when you got within earshot, talk centered chiefly around tonight's diplomatic reception. A long table at which refreshments could be had was centered with a huge bouquet of poinsettas. Tall white candles in silver holders on either side completed the decorations. Tea was poured at both ends of the table; but contrary to the custom established for most big diplomatic parties, there wasn't a cocktail nor a cup of coffee in sight.

Among those assisting during the party were wives of members of the embassy staff, including Frau Thomsen, Frau Scholz, Frau Blackenhorn, Frau Becker and Frau Tannenberg.

The diplomatic list and the social register seemed to have been thoroughly combed for the guest list. To mention but a few I saw — there were Senora de Espil, looking lovely as usual; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, greeting friends on all sides; the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik; Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Minister with the Counselor of the Chinese Embassy and Mrs. Zuang Teh Ing; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings in a trim grey frock and black hat; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis; Mrs. George Barnett, one of the most popular guests at the party.

Also, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., who will leave soon for New York to spend Christmas, and Mrs. George Pulver; Mrs. Joseph Cecil and her debutante daughter, Miss Caroline Cecil, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and the Misses Ann and Eleanor Meem; Major and Mrs. Parker West; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman and her daughters—Miss Laura Tuckerman, whose snappy black turban with the big red tassel was one of the most striking hats there; Miss Ruth Tuckerman and Miss Alice Tuckerman.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, the latter in a handsome black velvet frock with hat to match; The Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Senora Hector Ghiraldo; Dr. Jose Richling, Minister of Uruguay; Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin; just about all the social celebrities I saw at the musicale earlier, and dozens of others.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

YESTERDAY was an ideal day for afternoon parties, which was fortunate, as there were at least half a dozen of them. It was an agreeable contrast to come in from the cold outside to drawing rooms where fires blazed and a cup of hot tea was pleasantly warming.

DUDLEY HARMON.

First to the home of the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, where the latter was entertaining a group of wives of State Department officials at tea. Mrs. Sayre is an artist of ability and a member of several art societies. She is adept at arranging flowers, and yesterday a centerpiece of white roses and African daisies was particularly lovely.

Among those who journeyed out to the Spring Valley home of the Sayres were several wives of Assistant Secretaries of State, including Mrs. George Messersmith and Mrs. Hugh Wilson. Others present were Mrs. Richard Southgate, wife of the Chief of Conferences of the department; Mrs. John Farr Simmons, who wore stunning black and gray hat and a double silver fox scarf over her coat of Persian lamb; Mrs. Herbert Feis, wife of the Economic Adviser of the department; Mrs. Charles Darlington, Mrs. Harry MacBryde, whose husband is assistant to Secretary Hull; Mrs. Selden Chapin and Mrs. Lewis Clark, who came together, and Miss Margaret Frazier, sister of our Minister to El Salvador, Robert Frazier. At a ceremony attended by the staff of the Brazilian Embassy yesterday at 11 a. m., Senorita Sylvia de Queuros Lima of the Embassy, became the bride of Odair Grillo, young engineer studying in this country. The wedding took place in the Sacred Heart Church.

Following Brazilian marriage customs, there were two "best men," one for the bride and one for the bridegroom. Fernando Lobo, First Secretary of the Embassy, attended the bride, serving as proxy for the Ambassador, Oswaldo Aranha. Her maid of honor was the daughter of the Ambassador, Senorita Zazi Aranha.

Mrs. Roosevelt At Benefit Sale

Mrs. Roosevelt should know how it feels to do her Christmas shopping by flashlight—she bought two dolls at the Goodwill Industries' tea yesterday while photographers primed their cameras at her.

Social Washington turned out with a goodwill of its own to pour tea. Mrs. Bruce Barton, in black trimmed with dainty touches of white, got down to business with a sales book in her hand for any customers headed in her direction.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wearing a green ensemble, was the first to preside at the tea urn. Others at the tea table were Mrs. George Allen and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby. Also present was Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland, who was telling someone on the committee that she would "be in early tomorrow morning" for the second day of the sale.

Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, in black set off with a stunning necklace of silver and green, was everywhere at once like Mrs. Roosevelt; Mrs. William E. Borah declared the doll she had bought for someone else was so nice she almost wanted to keep it for herself, and Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson was busy inspecting the various articles for sale.

Others present were Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. Albert Warner, Mrs. George Romney, Miss Margaret Cotter, Mrs. John W. Guider and Mrs. John F. Dockweiler.

Jail Records Honored At Suffragist Reunion

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Pickets "fortunate enough to have been arrested" in the militant campaign for equal suffrage waged by the National Woman's Party in 1917 were guests of honor at a reunion luncheon yesterday at the Cosmos Club in connection with the biennial conference of the party.

It marked return of the picketers to historic Cameron House which was then their national headquarters from which they marched to the gates of the White House with their plea for a hearing on the suffrage amendment. If a resolution passed yesterday is carried out, a bronze plaque commemorating the event will be placed on the house.

Betty Gram Swing—looking not a day older, said her colleagues, than she did when she came out of the West 20 years ago to join the ranks of the suffragists—led the procession of picketers and prisoners of the suffrage days, who recalled experiences yesterday. A slight, fair-haired, dynamic person, she recalled her arrest, imprisonment and the hunger strike which she and other young women prisoners maintained for several days of their solitary confinement in small, dark cells.

Doris Stevens, another of the young women in the ranks in 1917, told of prison experiences both here and in Europe in the cause of equal suffrage. She is now chairman of the International Commission of Women, working for equal rights in the Latin American countries. Miss Mabel Vernon who, as director of the People's Mandate Committee, is now working for peace as she did for suffrage, recalled how a janitor from Cameron House used to trundle wheelbarrows full of hot bricks wrapped in burlap for the picketers to stand on in bitter winter days before the White House gate.

As Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton were the triumvirate of the early days of the suffrage movement, so Alice Paul, Lucy Burns and Doris Stevens were looked upon in the later years which marked victory for the suffrage amendment, said Mrs. Amelia Himes Walker, another who wears a prison pin, and who presided yesterday. Mrs. Walker also called on Nina Allender, noted cartoonist, who did much to sway public opinion through her drawings and also served the cause in the picket lines.

Elsie Hill another noted member of the party, told of going to jail in Boston for attempting to make a speech on Boston Commons. Gertrude Crocker, one of the first group of pickets, said that, while 500 responded then there probably would be 500,000 women now who would rally to the cause of equal suffrage.

Among other picketers present were Abby Scott Baker, Winona Marlin, Mrs. Margaret Williams, of Connecticut; Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Delaware; Miss Elsie Hill, of Connecticut; Burnita Shelton Matthews, of Mississippi; Laura Berrien, of Georgia; Betty Gram Swing, of Connecticut; Mrs. Gilson Gardner, Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, of Connecticut; Carry Harrison, Mrs. Almirah Sweeten, of Maryland; Lucile Calmes, of Indiana; Sara Grogan, of Georgia; Gladys Greiner, of Maryland; Joy Webster, of Nebraska; Mary Dean Powell, Anita Pollitzer, of South Carolina; Mrs. Norborne T. N. Robinson, Lucy Cooper Shaw, Ethel Adamson, of New Jersey; Margaret Hopkins Worrell, Mathilda Young, Eleanor A. Adams, Helen Hunt West, of Florida, and Mrs. Donald Hooker, of Maryland.

"Labor has got to stand for the principle of equal rights for men and women," Angela Bambace, of Baltimore, organizer for the Ladies' Garment Workers Union, asserted, "for the fundamental principle of labor unions is equality and justice."

Working women and labor unions should realize the opportunities they present to each other, Margaret Moss, of Akron, Ohio, declared. She is secretary of the Summit County (Ohio) Federation of Labor Clubs which has indorsed the equal rights amendment pending in both Houses of Congress.

Miss Moss called a labor union "the one place in the United States where women already have equal rights."

Other speakers at the luncheon were Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic national committeewoman for Pennsylvania, who is a friend of equal rights; Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, 1937 chairman of the Woman's Consultative Committee, created by the Council of the League of Nations, and Mary Catherine Lewis, vice president of the Lewis Hotel Training School.

Girl Scouts Busy With Yule Work

Make Toys, Dress Dolls and Fill Food Baskets for Washington Needy.

At Friendship House they are making toys for children near by and are planning a Christmas party. Some groups are dressing dolls, making doll furniture and coverlets for children's beds; others are working on articles for the nursery schools, planning to fill baskets with food, all of which will be distributed through the Council of Social Agencies. Other groups of Girl Scouts are dressing dolls for the Goodwill Industries.

There will be 22 troops participating in a Christmas celebration at Chevy Chase Circle Monday from 3:30 to 5 o'clock. Trees will be decorated for bird feeding. Sunflower seed, peanut hearts and popcorn will be all ground together and hung in the trees. Carol singing by this large group will be a part of the program.

Girl Scouts also will be a part of the group from character-building organizations, under the Council of Social Agencies, who will sing carols on the steps of the National Capitol Monday at 4:30 p. m.

Twenty-four Girl Scouts, from Troops 94, 114, 121 and 124, will form a guard of honor at the lighting of the National Community Tree December 24 at 5 o'clock in Lafayette Park by the President. Mrs. Roosevelt will be presented with a bouquet of flowers by Betsy Ellen Smith from Troop 68, in Virginia.

Saturday morning the Girl Scouts will view pictures in the Corcoran Art Gallery of the signers of the Constitution and their families. This special exhibit of pictures is in celebration of the Sesquicentennial of the signing of the Constitution.

Chinese School Discussed At Soroptimist Party

The Washington Soroptimist Club entertained as its honor guest and speaker at its luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel Miss Helen Loomis, of Gingling College, Nanking, China. Miss Loomis gave a brief history of Gingling College, pointing out that it opened its doors in 1915 with nine students, one of whom was the noted Dr. Woo, who was Chinese Ambassador to the United States.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

MRS. W. A. R. ROBERTSON (Margaret or Robbie to her many good friends in Washington) is here from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., visiting the B. H. Merchants in their new home, and brings news she is now a Girl Scout.

When Robbie was living at Bolling Field, where her husband was stationed while she was secretary to the late Joseph W. Byrns, Speaker of the House, she was occupied with too many important duties on the "Hill" to be concerned with Girl Scouting. In Fort Leavenworth, however, with fewer duties and four troops on the post, she has just become captain of one of them.

• • • •

It is no easy matter to gain the rank of captain, either, she avers—it meant six hours a week for four weeks, learning songs, folk dances, Girl Scout laws and promises and how to tie knots and build campfires—and she likes it, too.

• • • •

She likes Fort Leavenworth also, which she admits she did not expect to do. There is a woman's club there with a membership of about 400; there are all sorts of interesting classes, even one in making hooked rugs, which is conducted by an officer of the post.

• • • •

ROBBIE went up to the Capitol to say hello to friends the other day and held a regular reception for about three hours in the House Restaurant, where one after another joined the group surrounding her as word spread she was there.

SPENGLER UNIT of the American Legion Auxiliary, of which Mrs. Martin Dyer is president, is giving a Christmas party for 50 underprivileged children Saturday from 2 to 3 at the Thomas Circle Club. There will be knickers, dresses, lumber jackets, shoes, caps and sleeping garments—whatever the little boys and girls need—as well as stockings with toys, fruit and candy. In addition, the unit will provide a week's supply of food for the eight families from which the children come.

Mrs. Milton Landvoigt is in charge of the Christmas plans. Mrs. Dyer also is remembering the officers and chairmen of the unit with gifts.

DEAR ME I feel just like a reporter with Santa Claus as a special assignment this season. I only wish everybody would be as thoughtful of everybody else all the year around as at Christmas time.

Well, anyway, Miss Etta Mai Russell's apartment looked like Santa's headquarters night before last, when she and Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Women's council of the Washington Federation of Churches, made a start at sorting and assigning the several hundred toys given at last Saturday's movie party at R. K. O. Keith's Theater for children of Washington's alleys.

The toys were all lovely ones, said Mrs. Linzel, only two used ones among them and those just like new. There were trucks, games, dolls, dishes, countless things to delight the hearts of children. Other toys and contributions of money are coming into The Washington Post every day to round out Santa's pack before Christmas Eve. Dolls, by the way, and other toys for girls are particularly needed; for the boys' toys seemed to be in the majority at the movie party.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB of Arlington has anonunced something entirely new in the way of entertainment for its Christmas frolic this evening at the clubhouse on Columbia pike. Not only will there be a Santa Claus but he will have reindeer, as the husbands of members have been drafted for these roles. Which husbands will be which reindeer has not been revealed but it is expected they will be recognized when they come prancing in over the rooftops. Mrs. J. B. Lowell and Mrs. Lawrence Tuttle are in charge of the program.

• • • •

MRS. FRANK A. NICKOLS, chairman of the music department of the Takoma Park Women's Club, will be hostess at its meeting this morning. The program, in charge of Mrs. George Francis Williams, will include a paper on the history of carol singing and songs by Catherine Carrico, who studied for three years under Madame Alda. The choral group, under Mrs. Edmund Gree, also will sing.

Daughters of Nile Will Fete Mrs. Lee

Mrs. Florence K. Lee, of Washington, who was elected supreme queen of the Daughters of the Nile last summer will be honored at a banquet given by Samia Temple Saturday at 6:30 p. m. in the Garden Room of the Mayflower Hotel. The occasion will be coincident with Mrs. Lee's official visit to the temple, of which she is a past queen. The present queen is Mrs. Arlene B. Hines.

Mrs. Henrietta Vance is chairman of arrangements for the banquet, at which there will be special guests from New York, New Jersey and other adjacent temples, with a program presented by the Wilson's Teachers' College Glee Club, Mrs. Vance is being assisted by Mrs. Maud H. Shelton, vice chairman; Mrs. Ruth Blackistone, chairman of decorations, and Miss Marion Lee, daughter of the supreme queen, and a princess of Samia Temple, chairman of tickets.

The regular session of the temple will be held Monday at 7 p. m. at the Grafton Hotel. Bylaws will be considered and new members will be initiated, followed by the celebration in observance of the eighth anniversary of the temple. Women's Group In Chevy Chase Presents Play

Presbyterian Church Scene of Annual Christmas Production.

The drama section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club yesterday entertained the membership with its annual Christmas play, presented under the direction of Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport, in the assembly room of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. The production was a dramatized version of "The Cricket on the Hearth" by Dickens.

Four of the eight members of the cast are active in productions of the Montgomery Players as well as in the drama section. Mrs. Irving Day, chairman of the section, is one of these. Yesterday she had the role of Mr. Packleton. Others of the Montgomery Players were Mrs. Margaret B. Keyhoe, who had the part of Caleb Plummer; Mrs. David P. Wolhaupter, as the Stranger and Mrs. James F. Davidson, as Bertha. All of these members have appeared before in the club plays.

Others in the cast yesterday were little Miss Cicely Davenport, daughter of the director, as Tilly; Mrs. Harry F. Lowe, as Dot Perrybingle; Mrs. Campbell E. Waters, as John Perrybingle; Mrs. Edward L. Smead, as May Fielding.

Between scenes the choral group of the music section, under the direction of Louis Potter, sang Christmas carols. The chorus was organized 18 years ago by Mrs. T. W. Norcross, with a membership of 24, and was directed by her for the first two years. Following that the late Herndon Morsell became director and was in charge of the group until four years ago, when Mr. Potter took charge. It has grown in membership to approximately 50 and has developed into a chorus for whose singing there is a steadily increasing demand from outside the club. Mrs. James Oliver, one of the soloists, will sing before the Friday Morning Music Club tomorrow morning. There are also two members who lead choirs and one who is a composer. Mrs. Jay McCathran, regular accompanist for the chorus, was unable to be at the piano yesterday, and Mrs. Dawson Olmstead, former accompanist, substituted for her.

In addition to numbers by the full chorus there were three by a sextet including Mrs. Thomas Gulick, Mrs. William F. Henry, Mrs. Myron Witters, Mrs. William Graham, Mrs. August Koehler and Mrs. Carl Oeschle. Their songs were "Good King Wenceslas," "We Three Kings of Orient" and "God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen."

The choral numbers were "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "No Room for a Savior" and "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear."

Those in the chorus in addition to members of the sextet were Mrs. Ben Fisher, Mrs. Carl Stuhler, Mrs. William Collins, Mrs. A. L. Haycock, Mrs. H. L. Murrell, Mrs. Harold Dotterer, Mrs. E. M. Pusey, Mrs. R. R. Tinkham, Mrs. William F. Henry, Mrs. Diller B. Groff, Mrs. Holland Huntington, Mrs. George W. Graham, Mrs. W. Cole McCreery, Mrs. Roland Whitehurst, Mrs. Daniel Saunders, Mrs. Francis M. Shore, Mrs. J. P. Ault, Mrs. J. H. DeVeau, Mrs. N. K. Tabler, Mrs. Charles E. Felton, Mrs. George W. Kelley, jr., Mrs. A. B. Niess, Mrs. J. H. Dellinger, Mrs. Elijah Anthony, and Mrs. J. R. Bryant, jr.

Members of the club brought contributions of canned goods for the Montgomery County Hospital for Christmas, and Mrs. Herbert Eaton, the hospital representative for the club, took charge of the gifts.

Birth Announced.

Reorganization Plan Urges D.C. Labor Control

Minority Advocates Board to Enforce 8-Hour Day for Women, Fix Wages.

Omission of a recommendation to create a labor department for the District and proposals for financial relationships between the District and Federal governments yesterday occasioned two minority reports in the citizens' efficiency committee's report on the reorganization of the local government.

Mrs. Charles H. Weston and William L. Houston wrote the minority statement regarding a labor department. Thomas E. Lodge, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, submitted the minority report on "financial relationship with the Federal Government."

In their report Mrs. Weston and Houston stated that "with a single exception every State has a labor department." Mississippi, the lone State without this department, will have one next year. Houston stated he had been informed by the Governor of Mississippi.

Large Enough to Warrant It.

"The District is of sufficient size and importance to warrant the establishment of a labor department," they stated, "and any proposed reorganization of the District government should include some such provision."

The enforcement and administration of the following laws should be vested in a labor department, the minority report stated:

2. The minimum wage law for women.
3. Unemployment compensation. The Social Security Board recommends that unemployment compensation be administered by labor departments, and putting it there would be following the precedent established in most of the States.
4. Administration of the child labor law, now under the board of education.
5. Safety inspection in industrial plants.
6. Administration of the workmen's compensation act of the District, now under the United States Employes' Compensation Commission.
7. Administration of the District Employment Service, now under the United States Employment Service.

"Bringing these services under a single department head would eliminate duplication in inspection and records, thereby promoting efficiency and economy," Houston stated.

Finances Federal Problem.

The problem of finances of the District is basically a Federal problem, the report of the committee states, and it is entirely proper for District residents to contribute through taxation a portion of the costs of the District governmental operations, even though fundamentally the operation of such government is of primary concern to the Federal Government as such.

In his minority report, Lodge stated that he could not accept the statements contained in the report which related to financial relationship with the Federal Government.

"If a full discussion of these provisions were ever had by a full committee, I am not aware of it although requests for such discussion were made," he said.

The report, in part, states:

"The operation of the Federal Government consists of the activities of thousands of human beings, brought into this particular territory because the Federal Government desires that their work be done in this particular place. The maintenance of their efficiency is of prime concern to that government.

Direct Concern of U. S.

"Thus, the maintenance of order, the care of the parks, the public educational facilities, the sanitation provisions, and many other features of the District, which either make or destroy the morale and efficiency of these thousands of Federal employes, are of direct concern in the operation of the Federal Government.

Educator Calls Radio Program Home Menace

Dr. Sheehy Assails Skit in Which Mae West Was Interpreter of Bible.

That a movement, such as the Legion of Decency, is necessary "to protect the sanctity of the home from radio," the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of teh department of religion of Catholic University, stated in an address to the Newman Club of George Washington University last night.

"More despicable than the thief who invades your home under the cover of darkness is the radio sponsor who authorizes a filthy or religiously irreverent program. The low spot in all broadcasting history was, in my opinion, a broadcast of last Sunday in which Mae West was presented as an interpreter of the Bible. Of this program the Evening Times, of Little Falls, N. Y., stated: 'There is much justification among radio fans of this city and vicinity over a feature pulled off last night by the Chase and Sanborn Company between 8 and 9. It was a take-off on the Garden of Eden story with Don Ameche, in the role of Adam, and Mae West, as Eve. The latter did not pull her verbal salaciousness, nor was she at all inclined to be euphemistic . . . Those who feel as the Times does are advised to express their feelings to the Federal Communications System, Washington.'

Dr. Sheehy said: "Inasmuch as I was advised last week that such a pornographic program was planned, I wrote to the Chase & Sanborn Co. as follows: 'If Mae West indulges in her usual risque line next Sunday, the Catholic press and a national Catholic organization will appeal for a boycott of this program.' Despite that warning, Chase & Sanborn violated every law of decency in its broadcast, even over the protest of its own actors.

"The Federal statute on broadcasting is so vague that it is innocuous. True, if the members of the Federal Communications Commission wish to protect people from such filth as Chase & Sanborn purveyed last Sunday night, they can do so. But do they?

"Under the direction of a committee of bishops, the Legion of Decency has done much to raise the moral standard of the movies, basing its action upon the assumption that there are still enough decent people, Jewish, Protestant, and Catholic, to rally to its cause. I suggest that we petition this organization to extend its efforts to the field of radio.

"Ultimately we must appeal to the informed conscience of the individual and I am asking you tonight to do something about this affront to national decency."

Dr. Sheehy, who has just completed a term of office as president of the Eastern Association of College Deans and Advisers of Men, is head of the department of religion of Catholic University and a member of the board of visitors of the United States Naval Academy.

WPA Worker Held Guilty of Bigamy

A jury in District Court yesterday quickly found Franklin J. Moore, 41, a WPA worker, guilty of bigamy, a charge that arose after he and his second spouse were arrested when a passerby noticed a small infant locked in their parked automobile on a downtown street.

Publicity of the incident came to the attention of Mrs. Ina L. Moore, of Detroit, Mich., mother of three children. She identified Moore as her husband, and declared they had never been divorced. Conviction carries with it a possible sentence of from 2 to 7 years.

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1937 23

POVICH.

The one fellow, above all others, whom Coach Ray Flaherty wanted no harm to come to last Sunday was Sammy Baugh. And so it was that when big Dick Plasman, Chicago end, aimed a punch at Baugh near the Redskins' bench, the Washington coach was in a hurry to intervene.

Flaherty was the first to leap to his feet and the first to rush to the battle scene. He tackled Plasman high—high around the mouth—with a set of knuckles and put an end to the battle.

Plasman showed commendable courage but poor judgment when he tried to punch Baugh near the sidelines only 5 feet from the Redskins' bench, which was weighted down with big substitutes, itching for action. It was like walking into a police station to beat up a cop. It just wasn't the smart thing to do.

They love that Baugh, the Redskins do. Why, there were times out there Sunday on that frozen sod of Wrigley Field that the Washington linemen appeared more interested in protecting Baugh from harm than they did in making a play go through. After Slingin' Sammy was slapped down the first time by the charging Bears who were obviously out to rush him off his feet, the Redskins were obsessed with constructing a defense for Baugh.

* * * *

Big Turk Edwards came out of his position in the line to put his 255 pounds between Baugh and the Bear ends times without number. All day he was warning the Bears not to get rough with Sammy. On one occasion, in his eagerness to get back to Baugh and protect him on a passing attempt, Edwards actually knocked Sammy for a 15-yard loss, but Baugh only smiled knowingly.

It's a beautiful friendship that has ripened between Baugh and his Redskin colleagues. If there were any resentment that this newcomer threatened to steal the thunder of his veteran teammates, it was not noticeable. From the day Baugh first appeared on the Redskins' practice lot at Anacostia there was a camaraderie that was no less than amazing.

* * * *

The Redskins accepted the Freshman Baugh virtually right off the bat. They liked the way he forgot his college fame and got down to work like the veriest rookie trying to make good. And they appreciated, too, his forward passing. The guy could throw that ball, there was no doubt of that.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty sounded the Redskins' slogan that night in the Washington team's dressing room, ten minutes before the opening game with the Giants at Griffith Stadium last September. He told them then:

"For five years you fellows who have been with the Redskins have been crying that you didn't have a forward passer. You said that's all you needed to win the championship. Well, we've gone out and gotten you one. Sammy Baugh's the best damned passer in this league and he'll prove it.

"Tonight, out there, I want you to protect Sammy Baugh. The chances are the Giants are out to 'get' him. Well, I don't want to see any harm come to Sammy, and you're the fellows who have got to see that no harm does come to him. Give him some protection out there, and Sammy'll do his part."

* * * *

If there were any doubt about Baugh's passing ability in the professional league, it was dissipated that night. He threw 16 passes against the Giants and completed 11 of 'em. The Redskins were falling back to protect their new star as if he were something sacred. And Flaherty's words rang true. They did win the championship.

* * * *

Successively, Sammy Baugh met the league's best forward passers and outpassed 'em. Grosvenor, of the Cardinals; Herber, of the Packers; Danowski of the Giants, and Buivid and Masterson, of the Bears—none of these could rival Baugh's matchless skill. In fact, the Freshman Baugh made these passing greats look like tyros with his pass-chucking.

All season, the fellow was uncanny and his Texas admirers were guilty of vast understatement all these years when they were saying that Slingin' Sammy could bloody your nostrils with a football at 50 yeards.

* * * * *

The beauty of the fellow's work was not confined to the ultimate accuracy of his passes. Here against the Packers, in New York against the Giants, and in Chicago against the Bears he was beset by the fastest-charging linemen in captivity who had their orders to rush Sammy. And they did rush him. But Baugh prevailed, nevertheless.

He prevailed because he always had that ball cocked, whether set for the pass or on the dead run. He shot from the shoulder, and he shot from the hip. He fired from over his head, and he fired shovel passes and it didn't seem to make any difference. Off balance he was as accurate as when "set." He's a swell passer.

War Admiral Must Carry 129 Pounds

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 15.—Charles S. Howard's mighty Seabiscuit drew top weight of 130 pounds today as the Los Angeles Turf Club announced imposts for the $100,00 Aanta Anita Handicap to be run next March 5.

One pound less came Samuel Riddle's War Admiral, the Nation's outstanding 3-year-old and a candidate in the Santa Anita if his owner decides to send the Kentucky Derby winner West.

Ranging behind among the top flight prospects were Bert Baroni's Top Row, 1936 winner of the handicap, 123; Bing Crosby's foreign importation, Ligarotti, 122; R. B. Strassburger's Le Bambino, 120, and H. Luro's Amor Brujo, 120, and two other foreign horses; J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon, 120; T. P. Morgan's Heelfly, 119.

Ranking Seabiscuit, War Admiral and Rosemont at the top occasioned little surprise. The Biscuit won 11 races, placed twice showed once in 15 starts, and was the outstanding money winner of the year with $168,580.

War Admiral, whose appearance here is still in doubt, was undefeated in eight starts and won $166,500. Rosemont failed to place in two starts after winning the handicap here last winter, but was considered an outstanding threat.

Other important candidates and their weights were Aneroid, 119; Time Supply, 118; Indian Broom, 116; Sceneshifter, 112; Scabbard, 116, and Fairy Hill, 1936 Santa Anita Derby winner, 115.

Central Five Loses, 45-35

Lodge Brothers Spark Attack of Visitors.

By Jack Munhall.

The Lodge family, disguised as the Briagley Military Academy basketball team, invaded Central yesterday and inflicted a 45-35 defeat on the public school lads who were making their first start of the season.

It was purely a family affair with Briarley, and it all began back in November, when the five inaugurated practice. The first culprit who lodged in Central's hair was Papa Sydney Lodge, the coach, whose teachings reflected glory on him as his outfit swept up and down the floor to unloose a withering barrage of baskets. Then, there were the three little Lodges—Tom, Lee and Metcalf—who, between them, accounted for 40 of the visitors' points.

Lee, former Bethesda High star, was the individual leader with eight baskets and a free throw for 17 markers. He was closely followed by Capt. Tom, who sank four baskets and a foul shot. Metcalf was the floor man, feeding his two brothers, who seemingly couldn't miss the mesh.

Central, its passing and shooting ragged, was unable to penetrate Briarley's zone defense with any degree of regularity, and therein lies the cause for defeat. The team, however, showed promise, and several players of note.

Little Hoyas Bow To Bethesda, 45-11.

Coach Tony Kupka's Bethesda-Chevy Chase High five threw a wrench into Georgetown Prep's scholastic record yesterday at Bethesda by drubbing the Little Hoyas, 45 to 11, holding them to a single goal from the floor. It was the winners' opening contest.

Kupka, coaching his next-to-last game for the Bethesdans, before transferring his coaching activities to Woodrow Wilson High, turned out a smooth-working quintet that smothered the visitors under a barrage of 20 field goals and 5 free throws.

George Garber, George Washington guard, was poised for a shot at the basket when the cameraman snapped this picture last night at Tech High School. He made it to help the Colonials down Baltimore, 43-29. Bob Farris, a teammate, seems to be running interference for him, while the lad in the background is Bonsignore, of Baltimore.

Coaches Select Starting All-Star Line-up

That Washington's scholastic football strength is almost evenly divided between public and prep schools and that football as played in nearby Virginia is on a par with our own becomes more apparent each day as the All-Star squad concludes preparations for Sunday's game.

Yesterday, following a brisk scrimmage in Central Stadium, the coaches selected the line-up which will start the charity game against Monroe A. & M. in Brookland Stadium. This honor list contains the names of three Gonzaga Prep players and as many from Central, member of the interhigh football series, and Washington-Lee, nearby Virginia institution.

This line-up apparently embodies everything a winning eleven needs. The line is physically powerful, rugged, intelligent and alert. The backfield possesses four boys who can run, kick, pass and block. The attack is dangerous for it can rely on sheer power, provided by a line which averages 185 pounds, behind which Di Filippo and Shaw, a pair of powerful runners, are virtually unstoppable.

Cards' Five Beaten by Shepherd

C. U. Bows, 40-37, in Upset Before 500 Rooters; Ambrose Stars.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Catholic University's second warm-up opponent, Shepherd State Teachers College, proved to be a little too warm last night and the Cards took it on the chin, 40 to 37, before 500 fans in the Brookland gym. It was the first game of the year for the West Virginians and the first defeat in two starts for the locals.

Icy roads near Shepherdstown, W. Va., home of the visitors, almost made it impossible for them to get here—which would have undoubtedly been all right with C. U. The Shepherd team was forced to abandon the bus at Martinsburg and proceed by train, arriving nearly an hour late.

The Teachers started to make up for lost time by taking a 3-to-0 lead. F. Mitchell's pair of foul shots midway in the first half increased the lead to 10 to 3 before the Cotton-coached team got to work. Here Whitey Ambrose, high-scorin , flash, chucked in three consecutive field goals from all angles, without the ball hitting the rim, to bring the count to 10-9.

Shepherd Leads, 24-15.

Shepherd continued to set the pace and led by Capt. Hanna, who scored 8 points, were in the van, 24-15, at half time.

The Cards found themseves for a brief moment as the second period started and Irish Carroll, with a potshot half the length of the spacious gym, Ambrose and Miller edged up on the Shepherd boys to 20-24.

It was nip-and-tuck with Catholic finally tying the count at 25 all, on Ambrose's fifth basket. Krawczel scored his only floor goal to put the Cards ahead for the first and only time, at 27-25.

Casey Stars.

Casey and Formichelli scored five points before the C. U. boys knew time was in, and thre was the ball game. They held the lead until the game ended with the score-board reading 40-37 and the Red-Bird fans pleading for those three points.

Ambrose, with 15 points, was in

Winners Show Another Potentially Strong Cage Team.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Using a small and somewhat sloppy University of Baltimore quintet for the purpose, George Washington's rangy cage team inaugurated its 1937-38 campaign last night at Tech High School with a 43-to-26 victory.

It wasn't much of a ball game, from a spectators viewpoint, but it revealed that Bill Reinhart has another potentially good combination on his hands. Baltimore was too small, too erratic and too loose with the ball to give G. W. a stiff test, but in the second half the Colonials displayed all the earmarks of a topnotch ball club.

Butterworth Helpful.

Baltimore held its host on virtually even terms in the first period after getting off to a slow start. The Orioles pulled up to within 2 points of George Washington at the half time, 14 to 16, after trailing at one stage by an 11-to-4 margin. Pierson and Pulvino were the Baltimoreans' big guns in the drive, but in the second half, when G. W. plowed ahead the visitors' attack was completely muffled.

The Colonials missed Hal Kiesel, their gangly center of last year, and Milt Schonfeld and Ben Goldfaden, but Jack Butterworth's pivot work assauged the pain of those losses. Butterworth led both teams in scoring with five field goals and a brace of fouls, making most of his baskets from the pivot on well-timed shots. He was the key man in

Max Baer on Velvet; Hoffman Is Boss

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

New York, Dec. 15.—Don't waste your sympathies on Maxie Baer; the brand new papa is doing very well, thank you:

Ancil Hoffman, a mousy little man, was sitting in Mike Jacobs' office chatting with reporters about Baer and his baby, Maxie, jr. One of the writers said, "I'll bet Maxie wishes he had some of that dough he tossed away, now that he's got a kid to look after."

* * * *

Mr. Hoffman, of Sacramento, Calif., who manages Papa Maxie and his younger but bigger brother Buddy, smiled sardonically and said, "Don't worry about Maxie Baer. He's got more money socked away than he'll ever need—and he'll make plenty more before he's through. I don't know where people get the idea that Maxie is broke and that he needs sympathy."

Hoffman added that he rated Baer the fourth richest among modern heavyweights. He ranked him after Tunney, Dempsey and Louis—in that order. Yes, Ancil figured Baer had more money than Schmeling, whom he understood lost most of his roll in unfortunate investments.

I believe Baer is worth close to $200,000," Hoffman continued. "That includes property and things. I know he's got $127,000 in one chunk in an insurance company trust fund, from which he'll get an income of $2,000 a month, starting five years from now."

How in the world did Maxie ever save $127,000 in one chunk—the way he was tossing money around while he was champion? That's what the reporters wanted to know. Hoffman admitted that the Livermore Mauler did not save this chunk. Maxie never was much on saving. "I guess he blew more than a half-million dollars—on parties, automobiles, lawsuits, expensive wardrobes, etc. I took that $127,000 away from him and put it where he couldn't get at it."

This mild-mannered little man took $127,000 away from big, blustering Maxie! How did he do that? Well—after the million-dollar Baer-Louis fight in 1935, Ancil went to Mike Jacobs' office and took part of the Baer swag, $200,000 in bills of large denominations. He stuck that sheaf of bills into his inside coat pocket, jumped into a taxi and went to a downtown bank.

Did Hoffman mean to say that he rode around Manhattan with $200,000 in his pocket—and without a guard? "That's right," answered Ancil, "I didn't get a guard. I was afraid some of the men in the guard might double-cross me."

At the bank, he yanked the money out of his pocket—to the amazement of clerks—and deposited it. Then he drew a check for $127,000 and handed it to the insurance company representative. Previously Ancil had three attorneys draw up ironclad provisions which would prevent Maxie or anyone else from touching that $127,000 trust fund principal while Maxie is alive. Maxie will get the income from the fund, but the principal will pass on to his family after his death.

What did Maxie say about this deal? Naturally the former champion was considerably surprised and puzzled at the transaction. He laughed somewhat helplessly and told Ancil, "I like the way you spend my money. Yes, I like to see people have a good time with my dough."

* * * *

Ancil counterpunched with this: "You said it! So many people have been having a good time with your dough that you'll wind up behind the eight-ball, like most fighters, if somebody doesn't do something about it. Well, I'm doing something right now. I suppose you'll can me as your manager, but some day you'll thank me from the bottom of your heart."

Ancil revealed that even Maxie's father and mother suspected at first that he was trying to grab Maxie's $127,000 for himself. They had attorneys investigate. The investigation disclosed merely that Maxie had a nice trust fund which nobody could touch. So that was that.

It wasn't long before all the Baers realized what a smart move Ancil had made. Even Maxie finally digested the idea that he was a man with an estate. It steadied him a bit and made him less free in squandering his earnings. And with the arrival of Maxie, jr., the whole clan of Baers looked upon Manager Hoffman as the grandest guy in the world for having provided the baby with financial security in advance.

* * * *

Hoffman is in New York with brother Buddy, who fights Eddie Hogan, of Waterbury, Conn., at Madison Square Garden Friday night. He believes the 22-year-old Buddy, with more experience, will develop into a great heavyweight. Buddy weighs 245 pounds and stands 6 feet 6½ inches. He has an 84-inch reach.

Meanwhile, Maxie, his wife, Mary Ellen, and Maxie, jr., are living with the elder Baers at San Leandro, Calif., where Maxie bought his parents a fine home. Maxie is training to fight, in late February, the winner of the Farr-Braddock bout, slated tentatively for the Garden on January 21.

Maxie is earning between $1,000 and $1,500 a week refereeing and giving boxing exhibitions on the Coast, according to Ancil. And he has offers to tour South Africa, conduct an orchestra in England and to operate a large tavern in London. None of the offers guarantees less than $1,500 a week.

* * * *

So, you won't have to worry about Maxie Baer," Hoffman concluded, "He's only 28. He's got a nice wife and baby. And he'll probably be a millionaire before he's 35."

Filly Beats Eblis; Pays Backers $5

Cloudy Weather Shows; Queen Elizabeth Is Winner in Finale.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, W. Va., Dec. 15.—Setting a new track record for six and a half furlongs, Teddy's Star, owned by Mrs. K. N. Gilpin, won the Fairmont Purse, feature event of the mid-week program here in the mountains. Trainer C. M. Feltner put all of his eggs in one basket when he scratched E. R. Pike's Kenty and Teddy's Star made good for the favorite players in a big way. The daughter of Teddy finished a length in advance of H. Howard's Eblis, with B. F. Christmas' Cloudy Weather another three parts of a length away.

Ridden by Jockey R. Root, Teddy's Star was clocked in 1:19 3-5, a fifth of a second faster than J. B. Belk's Scudder ran the route a year ago. The new record holder carried 109 pounds, 1 pound less than Scudder.

The race, with a $700 purse at stake, was interesting especially to those who cashed the $5 mutuel. Showbal and Eblis battled for the honor of seting the pace with Teddy's Star close up. Along the backstretch, Showabal quit and Eblis moved to the front. However, Teddy's Star, under a grip to this point, was put to a drive and took command.

On the outside of the field came Cloudy Weather to gain contention and appearing ready to take it all. But Teddy's Star had punch left. Root quickened the cadence of his riding and Cloudy Weather gradually dropped back. Eblis, looking all the part of a stopping horse a moment before, responded to Jockey Berg's whipping and was moving up again as they went over the line.

Despite the fact that mist this morning put a thin layer of ice on the roads an average Wednesday crowd witnessed the program conducted over a fast track.

After Dixie Bee, a $4 favorite, won the first race by six lengths in the colors of Mrs. P. Dales Watts, Wild Blonde and Head Gear teamed to produce a $430.40 daily double by winning the second and third races. Wild Blonde, owned by T. J. Taylor, won by a length and paid an individual mutuel of $18.40.

Head Gear's triumph was the closest of margins over Waugh Scout, the latter having a good lead entering the stretch and faltering ahead of his charging rival. Head Gear an $28.20 shot, was Mrs. Watts' second winner.

Tempting Witch gave the favorite players a break in the fourth event by leading virtually all the way to pay a $5.40 mutuel. The filly led Indiana to the wire by a length and a half.

The sixth race brought an $11.60 mutuel after Cosmic Prince had overcome a lot of trouble of poor saddle judgment to win by a length and a half. Brooke Herod was second and Tuleyries Star third in the field of eight.

Goody Goody, veteran mare and rarely a winner these days, scored in the seventh race while running in the interests of Mrs. J. E. Rydesky. With apprentice jockey B. Hacker doing the pounding, Goody Goody came from far back to hang a nose defeat on Early Broom. The winner paid $8.60.

Hack Wilson's Wife Gets Court Award

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 15.—In an order handed down in Circuit Court here yesterday Lewis R. (Hack) Wilson, this city, former major league baseball star and home-run record-holder, is required to pay his wife, Mrs. Virginia M. Wilson, the sum of $20 monthly maintenance for their infant son; also pay on her counsel's fee and court costs.

Mrs. Wilson some months ago entered suit for separate maintenance. Wilson, who had his start in professional ball here and later established a home here, is now operating a road house near this city. He has not played either baseball or basketball—in which he at one time spent some time during the winter months—for some time actively.

TEMPTING WITCH, sent to front under hustling tactics and raced along, came wide at stretch turn and finished gamely under drive. INDIANA was closest to pace after first furlong and went willingly, but was no match for winner. SHANTEE was listlessly ridden after breaking on top. CRUSHED ICE improved position between horses, but tired.

TEDDY'S STAR, within striking distance of pace from start, came around EBLIS to take command and held on gamely under drive. EBLIS shook off SHOWABAL to take lead and came willingly under punishment in final stages. CLOUDY WEATHER moved up menacingly approaching stretch, but hung in closing test. SHOWABAL had something taken out of him getting to the front and tired. HIGHLAND SONG had some early speed.

COSMIC PRINCE, much the best, saved ground to backstretch, was taken back, came to outside boldly swinging for stretch and wore down BROOKE HEROD to win going away. BROOKE HEROD came between horses to get to front with rush at far turn and closed willingly, but could not resist winner. TULEYRIES STAR was forward factor from start, but was weakening at end. STORY TIME was used up setting pace and faltered. PRETTY LASS was weakly handled. MAHI was through early.

EARLY BROOM moved up to take command without effort, but faltered under drive in closing test. LADY'S FAVOR set a good pace, but had nothing left. SILVER ARCH faltered after pressing pace of LADY'S FAVOR. WITTEKIND had speed in spots. TOPSIE H. stopped early.

Post's Outdoor Notes

By Bill Ackerman.

Cold weather, with some wind, was the prayer of every duck hunter in this section early last week, but it seems as though the weather man, in filling the prescription, dished out the ingredients in doses so large that by Saturday morning the coves and protected bays were coated over with ice thick enough to keep the birds from coming in.

ACKERMAN.

Those with blinds where the current of the Potomac kept the waters open had some reasonably good shooting over the week-end. Mallards are decoying better with the change in weather, and there is hardly a bag that isn't predominated by this delicious table bird. Quite a few widgeons are flying, as well as some pintails—pheasant ducks as the baymen call them.

Until Friday, when more than an inch of ice covered Belmont Bay (Occoquan), the blinds in that area will be having swell shooting, not the limit in many cases, but still well worth the short trip down the road.

As late as Saturday night it was still solid, although softening. Bob Burdette, with a background of many, many years along the river, expects the last ten days of the season (ends December 26) to supply better shooting than we have had at any time during the last three years.

Reeves Hoover and his son, on Friday morning, shooting from one of Bob's blinds before the ice closed in, had five black mallards, one green mallard and three blackheads. John Hamilton's luck wasn't quite so good, while the bag of Dr. William Monroe showed sevel mallards.

If any of you deer hunters were not lucky enough to get your deer in Virginia or North Carolina; and even though you did, and feel as though you would like another to grace the festive board for the holidays, don't forget the season that opens in Jersey this week. Your allotted buck in these States doesn't count against you there.

The season this year, from December 17 to 21, the intervening Sunday excepted, will climax one of the most successful years for hunters Jersey has ever experienced. It is expected that the quest for this largest game of the southern Jersey pinelands as well as the hills of north Jersey will attract thousands, and where unlike many other States the hunting will not be so dangerous to the hunters because of the restriction on firearms.

Reports received from the game commission indicate that a kill, even beyond the record one of last year, will occur if the weather remains open, as many herds have been seen in the deer woods; and this in spite of the fact that the season will only allow four days of hunting (Jersey does not permit hunting on Sunday).

George Warren, jr., president of the game commission, urges upon all hunters in the State the necessity for the most careful handling of guns and the strict observance of the laws of the State.

He asks that hunters wear all the red clothing possible and to wait until the horns of the buck are plainly visible before shooting.

The greatest factor in keeping Jersey's casualty list so small is the law that prohibits the use of any rifle or firearm of any kind of a smaller caliber than 12 gauge, or to have in possession any missile except buckshot, or to hunt at night or anytime with dogs during the season.

• • • •

Hunters are allowed one buck with horns over three inches long during the season and they must be reported to a game warden or to the fish and game commission within 48 hours under a penalty of a fine of $100. The shooting of fawns is positively prohibited as well as the shooting of does.

Hunters are also prohibited from removing the head or skin of a deer carcass in the woods, and only game wardens may remove illegally killed deer from the woods or fields. The hunting of raccoons is temporarily suspended during the extent of the open deer season.

A three-section exhibit, each relating to conservation, it was learned, from a joint statement by Fred Kisor, secretary of the Maryland Outdoor Federation, and Ryland N. Dempster, State director of National Youth Administration, will be entered in the outdoor show in February.

• • • •

The exhibits, constructed here in Washington by N. Y. A. youths, will give a visual lesson in the need for conservation. One section, planned to illustrate what happens when conservation measures are disregarded, will show denuded forest areas, dry gulleys, rivers and eroded farms, while a contrasting exhibit will display the beneficial results of conservation management, and will include farms, flowing streams, a lake, a power dam, a recreation area and forests.

It is hoped, and every effort is being made, says H. Lee Hoffman, president of the Maryland Outdoor Federation, to bring to the public mind, in as forceful a manner as possible, the urgent need for conservation.

Pat Meehan, Macaluso in Semifinal

Jesse James, whose real name is Demitros Stephanos Tzigikos, will parade his newly won world's light heavyweight championship belt into the ring at Turner's Arena tonight to meet Chief Thunderbird, the big Indian from Vancouver, on Promoter Joe Turner's benefit wrestling card.

The supporting card will show Jen Macaluso, Colgate's former All-American football hero, a Sicilian by birth, against Pat Meehan, the British Empire champion, who grapples much on the order of Crusher Casey.

In a special 30-minute bout wrestledom's newest freak, if he can be called that, one John Sullivan, an Irish Goliath, makes his bow against John Grandovich, the Polish behemoth. Sullivan, a direct descendant of the mighty Finn McCoul, is seven feet four, weighs 275 pounds, and has a 94-inch reach. He is eight inches taller than Primo Carnera.

Al Pereira, a Portugese wrestler, who claims the European championship, returns for a shot at Vanka Zeleznaik, the Russian villain. Pereira made quite a hit beating Abe Kashey last week.

Two newcomers, Clarence Baddo and John Bogner, both Hungarians, clash in the opener at 8:30.

A born acrobat and showman, James flashes a thousand tricks and holds, and never lets the mat get dull. He proved that when he won here from Henry Kulkovich in 12 minutes, showing fans some tricks they had never seen before.

Thunderbird, the Spanish Indian, will have his stooge, Swift Eagle, with him tonight. Thunderbird has won five out of six matches, drawing a month ago with Cliff Olson.

Colonials Win

Tommy O'Brien, second high scorer of the District last season and possibly the most accurate potshot artist ever developed in the vicinity, flipped in three field goals, but missed several others by an eyelash. He obviously wasn't at his best.

Baltimore tied the score at 16-all on Sweiskosz's snowbird immediately after the start of the second period, but Butterworth sank two quick field goals for G. W. and the Colonials soon had matters well in hand. Butterworth, with Faris and Auerbach contributing four points, prodded the count to 31 before Baltimore counted again and on a foul at that, and continued to dominate the scene until sent to the showers.

In a preliminary game the Colonial Freshmen came from behind to win a 37-29 victory over George Washington High School, of Alexandria.

Hyattsville Is Defeated

Coach Herman Littman used every player on his squad yesterday as Roosevelt High School opened its basketball season by defeating Hyattsville, 30-26, in a nip-and-tuck struggle on the Roosevelt floor.

Due to the frequent substitutes used by the Rough Riders an inferior Hyattsville five was able to keep within striking distance and never did more than four baskets separate the two teams. In all Roosevelt employed 13 boys with Stein and Zuras pacing the scoring with 8 and 5 points, respectively.

In a preliminary the Roosevelt Junior Varsity won over a similar team from Tech by the score of 32-5. So close did the winning Jayvees guard that Tech was held to a single field goal.

Miller Five Wins, 27-19

Merrick Also Victor in S. E. C. C. Cage League.

Miller Furniture took the measure of the Trojans last night in a Southeast Community Center Basketball League contest, 27 to 19, that was full of thrills from start to finish. Johnson and Miller, for Millers, and Beye, for the Trojans, led in the scoring.

Merrick Boys Club is still at the top after defeating the Shamrocks, 31 to 22. The Northeast Boys were mighty lucky to win as Shamrocks were leading three-fourths of the game. Cole, for Merricks, with 11 points and Adlung, with Shamrocks, were the stars.

Sigma Mu Sigma and Procurement put on a great contest that was won by the latter five, 25 to 18. Verrella, with 11 points, kept the Money Counters out in front.

Local Sports Figure To Be Honored Tonight

Henry Viner, one of Washington's greatest charity workers and sports figures, will be tendered a party by employes of his Sunshine Arcade Laundry tonight. Carl Linker, one of Viner's staunchest admirers, is behind the movement, and is supported by hosts of Viner's friends.

Viner for many years has been one of Washington's No. 1 ranking fans and is currently an incurable addict of the Washington baseball and Redskin football teams, as well as other local sports activities.

Mathias Will Quit Ring For Career of Artist

Golden Gloves Titlist to Devote Entire Time to His Work.

By Bob Garrison.

Art for art's sake. That's the verdict handed down by red-haired Bobby Mathias, national amateur welterweight champion. He will not turn professional.

Instead, the 21-year-old boxer-artist will hang up his gloves to devote his time to his commercial art work after having spent hours trying to decide which of two promising careers to follow. He made the decision yesterday.

Thus ended a glorious ring career that saw a lanky, likable, modest youngster attain the highest honor in amateur ranks inside the short space of four years. Since he was graduated from Central High School in 1934, Bob learned the fundamentals of boxing, earned local recognition and then captured the National Golden Gloves title last Monday in Boston to complete his meteoric climb.

But he desires to go no farther. He has talents in another field and has decided to apply them. His boxing career completed, he said, yesterday, that he plans to devote more time to his art work. Seated behind his easel in the Post Art Department, where he has been an apprentice for several months, he reckoned:

"It was a great experience, my winning that National title, and I seriously considered several offers to continue as a professional. I can't give too much credit to Matt Twomey, the National Guard boxing coach, and I appreciate his interest and aid. But my decision is final.

"I have talked with persons associated with me in my art work, and have enough confidence in their opinion to cast my lot. I have been told that with considerable practice my work should improve sufficiently to warrant my holding a job. I have been given a practical start, here, at the Post and am going to devote as much time as possible to my brushes.

It's not likely that Bob is making the wrong decision, either. He studied several years at the Corcoran Art School while attending Wilson Teachers College and his works have been shown at several local exhibits. He is quite a busy fellow besides his boxing and art work. He works evenings at the Congressional Library, a building many boxers have never visited. He had to obtain time off to train for the local Golden Gloves bouts, then had to get additional time to make his two trips to Boston for the national championship.

It's just another case of an artist, gifted with talents in two fields, who found himself forced to choose between them. Where many would not have given art a second thought at such a crisis, Bob has remained level headed and reached his conclusion.

So one of the most promising boxers ever turned out by the amateur ranks in the National Capital has finished a job and seeks more worlds to conquer—in another field. Fistiana's loss will be artdom's gain.

Terry Bowlers Tie for Lead

Terry's Home Appliance Co. created a triple tie for the Recreation lead last night at the Recreation alleys by taking a 2-to-1 decision from the Marlboro Hotel bowlers. Murphy with 369, Nicholson with 366 and Hollis' 360 paced the victors. Joe Harrison's 369 was high for the losers.

University Shop, the third team in the triple deadlock, won three from Blanken's Restaurant when they rolled a season's record set of 1,876, including Simon's 410 and Groth's 397.

Bergman's Wildcats with Sam Simon rolling 409, whitewashed Cooke Press to remain in the running for first place. Allied Roofing took the odd game from Herzog's, and Blaydes Contracting Co. swept the set with Marvin's Credit.

W. B. Hibbs' 1,622 team set was high in the Bankers League at Arcadia while National Savings & Trust won team game honors with 599. Clark, of American Security & Trust No. 2 rolled high individual set of 370, while Hayden took game honors with 143.

C-Club Will Meet.

The Graduate C Club of Central High School will hold an important meeting Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the University Club. All members are urged to attend as officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

Foreclosures Drop Sharply In Past Month

Decline for 11 Months of This Year Is 21.2 Per Cent Under Year Ago.

A marked decline in real estate foreclosures throughout the country during November was reported yesterday by the division of research and statistics of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. The figures show a drop from those of October of this year and of November, 1936.

On the basis of reports from 778 communities representing approximately 46 per cent of the total population of the United States, the board's statisticians found that foreclosures decreased 2.5 per cent during November as compared with the previous month, and 24.4 per cent in contrast to the corresponding month of last year.

Reports for the first 11 months of 1936 and 1937 showed a decline in foreclosures of 21.2 per cent for this year under last, it was stated. The reports embraced farm as well as non-farm properties and included virtually all the large cities of the country except Cleveland, St. Louis, Baltimore, Washington, New Orleans, Kansas City, Mo.; Providence, R. I.; Gary and South Bend, Ind., and Lowell, Mass.

Corn Demand From Overseas Raises Prices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec 15.—Activity of corn export demand brought about 1⅝ cents a bushel net advance of corn values today, whereas wheat at the last was practically unchanged.

Europe purchases of United States corn today were estimated at 1,000,000 bushels, and there were intimations that the total would have been a good deal larger if greater quantities were available for immediate shipment.

On the other hand, interest of wheat traders centered mostly on the Argentine Government crop report, which was not possible to obtain until long after business here had ended for the day.

At the close, corn futures were ⅞ to 1⅝ cents above yesterday's finish, Dec. 58¼@58¾, May 59⅝@59¾, July 60, wheat ⅛ off to ⅛ up, Dec. 95⅞@96, May 92½@92⅝, July 87, oats ⅛ to ⅜ advanced, rye showing 1 to 1¼ cents bulge, and provisions dearer 5 to 12 cents.

Steel Maintenance $227,900,000 in Year

New York, Dec. 15 (AP).—The steel industry's maintenance and repair bills in 1936 totaled $227,900,000, the equivalent of 9 per cent of sales volume, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

This was a rise of 40 per cent over $161,500,000 for 1935, but the institute pointed out the increase reflected the higher rate of steel output in 1936.

The Market

Stocks Firmer in Less Active Trading; Bonds and Commodities Steady.

New York, Dec. 15.—Stocks, bonds and commodities developed a firmer tone, but any exuberance in advancing stages was checked and slack dealings were the rule. Stocks were no worse than irregular and much of the time the majority were fractionally to a point or two higher. United States bonds were steady. If the fourth quarterly income tax date depressed men's spirits, at least most of them had made before now their financial preparations and, if anything, the markets acted relieved.

With the progress of the week the markets are finding less and less to guide them over near future. There was a further subsidence of anxiety over the Japanese war scare, less because any fundamental improvement in condition took place than because of the passage of more time in which no fresh attack was made in the Oriental theater of fighting. The small public has been pretty well subdued and is much less inclined to buy or sell stocks in response to daily news that it was, say, a few months ago when its positions were greater. As for the professionals, in their circles there is no lively expectation of an early war.

In many respects the stock market since the first of this month, or the closing days of November, has confirmed the chart analysts who predicted that, if precedent were followed, a rally was more to be expected than a further decline before the end of the year. Inquiry at head offices of numerous corporations uncovers more news of additional layoffs, pay reductions and the like than of preparations to place orders for materials or of expectations of sales orders. Business is still clearly slowing down, but the pace seems to be less rapid than it was a few weeks ago.

Meanwhile the industrial statistics to be published over the next two or there weeks will cover largely that which has taken place. What is now occurring will be known tardily to the public holders of stocks. Reviewing the steel trade, the Iron Age says that "for the first time in more than three months there has come a halt in the decline of steel-making operations," and the inventories are now thought to be down to normal. An actual advance in steel-scrap price was reported.

Steel.

United States Steel in the fourth quarter will average around 35 per cent of capacity, some persons estimate, and at that rate it is possible that the preferred dividend was not covered, although much depends upon year-end adjustments and late deliveries, which carry with them payment on contracts. In any event, the regular quarterly payment on the preferred will be made at the January meeting of the directors. United States Steel did not pay out to common stockholders enough cash to eliminate the penalty tax. The board preferred to pay some tax and keep some of the cash than to run the risk of being short of working capital in a period of poor markets and business uncertainty.

Odd Lots.

The voices may not sound the same, but words when put into print give much the same meaning in Great Britain as they do here. The London Financial News, for example, quotes Reginald McKenna, chairman of the Midland Bank (the world's largest bank), as saying "there is no reason to anticipate the decline extending to industry as a whole." The newspaper heads the story "No Slump in Sight" . . . Paramount was weak today, perhaps because some stockholders had supposed some of he profits, after preferred dividends, would seep through to them. The public doesn't seem to follow any particular technic in valuing motion picture, liquor and tobacco securities, and even the experts have a hard time, largely because of the many profit sharing, bonus and other special arrangements that tend to complicate matters for the uninitiated . . . The governing committee of the stock exchange will vote today to adopt or thoroughly to end the plan for a sharp rise in commission rates.

London Gold.

Gold offerings in the London open market today were the largest since early in November, the amount being $4,483,206. The price moved down half a penny an ounce and, since sterling at the time of fixing was off a trifle, the American equivalent price dropped about 3 cents an ounce to $34.93. While hoarding demand is still a consequential factor in the London market, it is generally assumed that official funds are also taking some metal, thereby maintaining a fairly stable premium.

Railroad Traffic.

Railway freight traffic last week again was poor and from now until the first of the year a gradual recession can be expected. The Sun estimates that carloadings declined 0.5 per cent from the preceding week and were 15.9 per cent below the total loaded in the like week of the previous year.

Assesment.

A proposed plan for Wabash reorganization contemplates a $7 a share assessment for the common and preferred stockholders. Such an assessment would cost Pennsylvania about $5,000,000. Many a reorganization, if it comes, will involve a stiff assessment for both common and preferred shareholders, but the market seems to think the securities of the old companies are worth something. Stocks in companies undergoing reorganization usually hold to at least a "nuisance value" to the last ditch, and once in a great while the speculators are rewarded through the adoption of a plan that takes more from creditors than at first would seem probable, or through some unexpected improvement in business.

Westinghouse Taxes Up 600% Since '34

Pittsburgh, Dec. 15 (AP).—A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., said today the increased taxes the company has paid since 1935 would be sufficient to pay wages of 6,500 unemployed men. In a protest against increased taxation, telegraphed to Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, and Chairman Fred Vinson, of the House subcommittee, he said: "It is well to remember that money paid in taxes cannot be paid in wages."

He said the Westinghouse Co.'s taxes have increased 600 per cent since 1934, from $2,500,000 four years ago to more than $16,000,000 in 1937. The increase since 1935, he said, has been more than $11,000,000.

Steel Decline Halts After 3 Months' Drop

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 15.—The decline in steel-making operations has been halted for the first time in more than three months, this week's output being at 27½ per cent of capacity, unchanged from the week preceding, Iron Age said today in its weekly review of the industry.

"It seems likely that approximately the present operation will be maintained up to Christmas," the trade publication stated, "at which time some steel-making capacity probably will be shut down until after January 1. During the final week of the year, however, business may be accumulated that will start operations off in January moderately above the present level."

The review noted that such important districts as Pittsburgh, Chicago, eastern Pennsylvania, Buffalo, Wheeling-Weirton, Birmingham and Detroit are holding their previous rate. The Cleveland-Lorrain district has gained 2 points, while the southern Ohio area, at one time below 10 per cent of capacity, has worked back up to 22 per cent.

Supplies Are Low.

"Stocks of steel in the hands of some consumers are now believed to be below normal," the review said. "This is indicated by the great number of small orders being received, emphasizing the care that steel users are exercising in holding inventories to an absolute minimum until year-end stock taking is out of the way. Replenishment buying on a more general scale is probable in January, though the steel industry holds no expectations of an early rise in operations of more than very moderate proportions.

"The Iron Age composite scrap price has risen for the second week, now being $13.42, or 50 cents above its recent low. There have been some small mill purchases, but part of the strength in the market is accounted for by speculative buying by dealers.

"Conditions in the automobile industry are immediately discouraging, but even so an output of about 4,000,000 cars in 1938 is hopefully predicted by automobile statisticians against almost 5,000,000 in 1937."

C. C. Conway Heads N. Y. Exchange Probe

New York, Dec. 15 (AP).—Carle C. Conway, head of Continental Can Co., has been elected chairman of a special committee for study of the administration of the New York Stock Exchange, it was announced today. The nine-man committee was appointed last week by Charles R. Gay, president of the exchange, following a recent threat by the SEC to intervene unless the exchange revamped its administrative setup.

Trowbridge Callaway, of the stock exchange firm of Callaway, Fish & Co., was named vice chairman and William McC. Martin, jr., of A. G. Edwards & Sons, St. Louis, was elected secretary.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't suppose I'll ever get used to the custom the society people out here have of dressin' for dinner and I was always kinda proud of my folks down home because they never went in for such foolishness.

You could jest imagine the shock I had one time when I was havin' my Thanksgivin' dinner at my Uncle Hod's house. About an hour before it was ready, us men folks was all sittin' out on the front porch when Aunt Puney come to the front door and said "Hod, you better come in and dress for dinner."

I began to think that I had gotten mixed up in one of them dress affairs and was kinda embarrassed because I didn't have no tuxedo but I says "Aunt Puney, what do you mean—Uncle Hod has'ta dress for dinner?" and she says "Well, he has'ta carve the turkey and I think he'd better put on his high-bib overalls."
